Grand day for the dogs

It's a dog's world, as 247 entries demonstrated at the 19th annual Northwest Obedience Club show Saturday at Buffalo Grove High School.

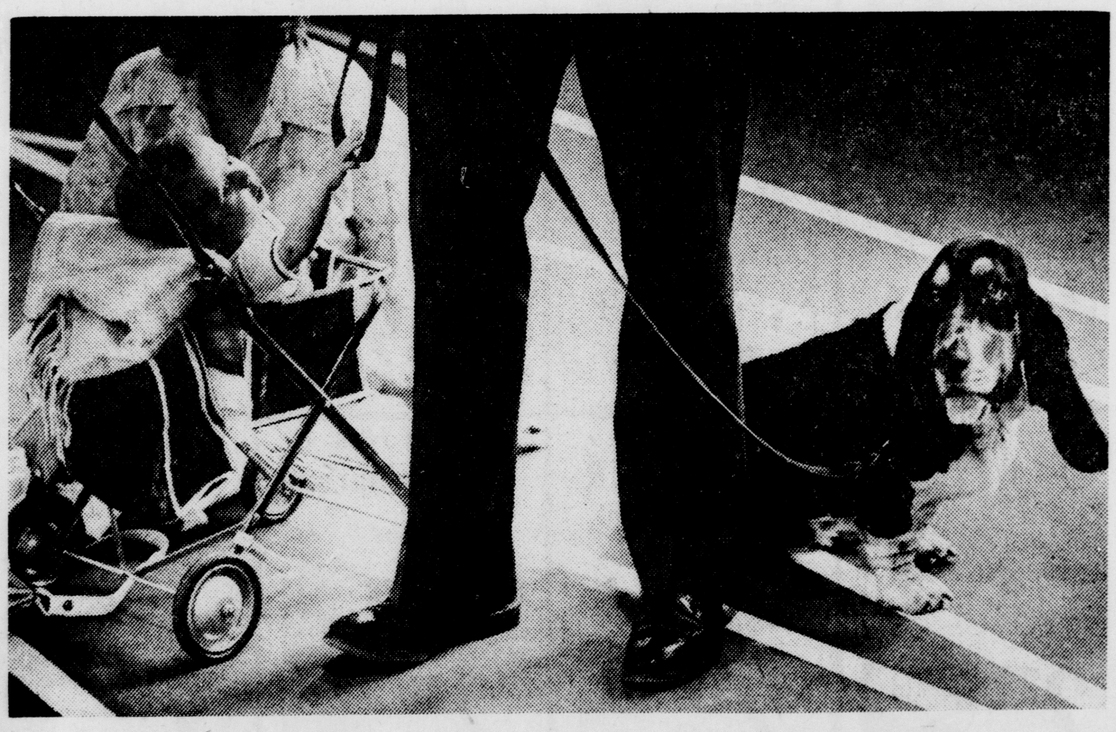

Owners and trainers from six states entered 51 breeds of dogs at the all-day show at the high school, Dundee and Arlington Heights roads, Buffalo Grove. Dogs were scored according to poise and performance on a scale of 200.

Taking first place with a score of 198½ was Meg, a 1½-year-old border collie owned by Marilyn Schweisberger of Rockford, Ill. Taking second: Prince Petrowsky, a 3-year-old German shepherd owned by Ted Petrowsky of Burbank, Ill.

About 275 persons attended the event.

Using state rule as model

Village drafting curfew law for July 12 debate

A curfew ordinance to help curb juvenile vandalism is being drafted by Arlington Heights Village Atty. Jack Siegel.

It will be considered for adoption by the village board at its next meeting, July 12.

The board this month directed Arlington Heights police to begin enforcing the State of Illinois curfew regulation, although the law may be unconstitutional.

Neither state nor local curfew laws have been enforced by local police since October 1975 when the 2nd District Appellate Court of Illinois ruled that the Illinois juvenile curfew law restricts freedom of movement without proper justification.

Siegel told the village board that Arlington Heights and other communities in the 1st District are not bound by an appellate court's decision from another district. He also predicted the ruling would be overturned by the Illinois Supreme Court this fall.

THE VILLAGE'S Zero Vandalism Committee has urged enforcing that a juvenile curfew ordinance, despite the 2nd District ruling in hopes of reducing summertime vandalism in Arlington Heights.

The village's new curfew ordinance will be modeled after the state curfew law, "but I'm going to try to tighten it up to meet the objections stated in the appellate court decision," Siegel said.

The 2nd District court's decision involved a group of youths convicted in a circuit court in Ogle County for violating the state curfew law. "There must, of course, be extraordinary reasons to justify curfew," the ruling statis.

Siegel has said the appellate court ruling "was not a very well-thought-out opinion" because it does not cite any Illinois cases.

SIEGEL SAID the ordinance he is preparing now will attempt to "cover extenuating circumstances" while trying to restrict the time, place and activity occurring.

"The curfew is not a solution to vandalism but it certainly would help," Police Capt. Paul Buckholz said.

"We've never used it that much, but the kids always knew the law was there," he said.

Many Arlington Heights parents have called police asking them to enforce a curfew law to help them handle their children, according to Buckholz.

The State of Illinois juvenile curfew statute sets curfew for persons under 17 years old at 11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and at midnight Friday and Saturday.

Reagan sweeps Western delegates

by IRA R. ALLEN

Ronald Reagan, as expected, captured all 45 delegates in his western preserves this weekend to move closer to President Ford in the increasingly bitter fight to the finish for the Republican presidential nomination.

All Ford could salvage from the weekend was a 17-1 delegate victory in Minnesota early Saturday, before Reagan swept all four delegates at stake in Idaho, 21 in New Mexico and 20 in Montana.

The UPI delegate count Sunday showed Ford with 1,064, Reagan with 994, uncommitted with 103 and 98 to be chosen — 25 in Colorado and 18 in North Dakota the weekend of July 10-11 and 35 in Connecticut and 20 in Utah the following weekend.

In the Democratic race, with only five Puerto Rican delegates left to be chosen, the UPI count showed Jimmy Carter had 1,714, 209 more than needed for the nomination next month.

NO MATTER who wins the Republican nomination, the victor will face an uphil fight against Carter, who has between 53 per cent and 58 per cent of the vote, according to all the polls in recent weeks.

The Gallup Poll published Sunday showed Carter beating both Ford and Regan by 2-1 margins in the South, which could return to the Democats as a bloc for the first time since Lyndon Johnson's 1964 landslide.

The poll showed Carter beating Ford 63 to 28 per cent in the South

Panel to hear ways to aid downtown business district

The president of the Oak Park Development Corp. will be the guest speaker tonight at a meeting of the special committee studying ways to improve the central business district in Arlington Heights.

Arthur Replogle will explain how the nonprofit development corporation stimulated growth in Oak Park's downtown business area and methods of financing such projects as parking garages and pedestrian shopping malls.

Oak Park recently was named one of 10 "All-American" cities in the United States.

Local businessmen are urged to attend the meeting, which will begin at 8 p.m. at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rod.

Trustee August Bettman, chairman of the downtown improvements committee, said a report also will be given on recent meetings concerning the possible construction of a shopping center-parking garage using the air-rights over the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks in downtown Arlington Heights.

Railway spokesman have said they are interested in selling the air-rights and two developers have expressed an interest in the project, according to Village Planner Joseph Kesler.

Bettman said Friday the committee also is ready to begin drafting recommendations on what projects should be constructed and how they should be financed.

60 in running for new social services post

More than 60 persons have applied to fill the recently created position of human services coordinator for the Village of Arlington Heights.

Gregory Ford, village personnel director, said the interviews of the candidates began last week and should be completed within the week.

The job, which pays $12,300 per year, was recommended last year by John W. Gianopulos, chairman of the village senior citizens commission. The position was opposed by some members of the village board and the village administration, before its approval this year by the board.

Ford said the coordinator will be responsible for evaluations of village social service programs; will act as a liaison to the village social service committees and commissions, and work with the professionals on the staffs of agencies receiving village funding.

He said the search for the coordinator has centered on the Chicago area.

"We didn't go nationwide on this one," he said, referring to the national search currently under way to find a replacement for retiring police chief L. W. Calderwood.

Ford said he expected the social service position to be filled in about two weeks, depending on how much notice the person selected must give his present employer.

Liability key issue in flu-shot program

The problem of legal liability in administering the federal swine flu vaccination program is being tackled by Task Force '76, which is planning Palatine Township's inoculation drive. "There is no way this program is going to be successful until this question of liability is resolved," Township Supervisor Howard Olsen said Saturday during a meeting of civic and health care representatives. Barbara Michelini, a nurse with Care Inc., a health care facility, said some drug companies who manufacture the vaccine have stopped because of their concern over liability. "I don't think we should take this issue lightly," she said. The task force plans to contact local congressmen to show support for a law to provide blanket liability coverage for those involved in the inoculation program. Meanwhile, Prospect Heights, Wheeling and Buffalo Grove officials are considering a joint two-day flu immunization program this fall for residents of their communities.

Sprinkling limit debate today

Wheeling village officials tonight will consider limiting lawn sprinkling and other summertime water use to two days a week. Village Mgr. Terry Zerkle has called the water situation in the village "critical." Under the new proposal, residents would be limited to sprinkling their lawns on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Filling swimming pools and washing cars also would be limited.

'Suburban slum' solution sought

"Nobody wants a suburban slum," U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, Saturday told a newly created task force studying problems facing residents in unincorporated Maine Township east of Des Plaines. Mikva said the purpose of Saturday's meeting was to "unify our efforts" in solving some of the problems. Representatives of homeowners and tenants groups have been complaining about housing conditions, police protection and water service in the area. In response to a survey of residents in The Greens 2,000-unit apartment complex at 8884 Stevens Dr., 38 per cent said there were rodents and roaches in their apartments, 88.8 per cent said the drinking water was rusty, odorous and full of sediment, and 85 per cent said the security was inadequate. One resident said the drinking water in the Golf Park townhouses is "the color of slag water that comes out of a steel mill." Mikva has called for scheduling three more meetings with county and municipal officials to discuss residents' problems.

Winds blow down Maryville tent

A summer thunderstorm ripped through the Northwest suburbs Sunday night, spawning four funnel clouds and injuring five persons when a 300-foot tent in Des Plaines was blown down. Police said five persons were treated for minor injuries at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines. The L-shaped tent set up for a fund-raising banquet at Maryville Academy, 1150 N. River Rd. Four funnel clouds were sighted over Palatine, Schaumburg and Roselle between 8:30 and 9:15 p.m., but none touched down.

Officials cite economic upturn

Job prospects good in suburbs

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Now is a good time to look for a job and get one, said James G. Ballee, assistant manager of the Illinois State Employment Service, 40 N. Main St., Mount Prospect.

Ballee said he knows of at least 5,500 trade and professional job openings. "Last year and the year before it was tough. Unemployment is down, and the number of people coming in here (looking for jobs) is down. It's a good sign, a positive sign we have many more jobs than we can fill," he said.

About 400 persons visit the office daily seeking employment. Ballee said approximately half of those interviewed are referred to prospective employers.

The Mount Prospect office is the only state employment agency in the Northwest Suburbs.

"Things normally slow down somewhat in July and August," Ballee said. "People go on vacation and businesses are not geared up. The busiest season is in September when companies start gearing up for Christmas and production is more plentiful," he said.

EVERETT CALLAWAY, manager of the Mount Prospect office, said an increase in job availability and in "call-backs" by employers is one reason more person's are returning to their jobs. "The job picture has dramatically increased since three months ago," Callaway said.

"It's a possible indication that the economy is on the upturn."

Ballee said the unemployment rate in the Northwest suburbs is less than 6 per cent. "That's substantially lower than Chicago," he said. Chicago and its six surrounding counties post an unemployment rate of about 7.5 per cent, while unemployment statewise is approximately 7.2 per cent.

The number of persons filing for unemployment compensation is down, too, in relation to last year at this time, said Tom Revane, manager of the state's unemployment insurance claims office, also located in the Mount Prospect office.

REVANE ATTRIBUTED the decline in unemployment claims to a boost in the construction industry. "What hurt us most last year was the construction industry. It was down tremendously. I see some tradesmen in here but not nearly as many as I saw last year. Economy-wise, the construction industry has picked up, and there has been some movement of industry to the Northwest suburbs," he said.

Revane said there is more money available for construction. "The prime rate is pretty low compared to last year and as long as the construction industry stays solid, we'll see good prospects for employment," he said.

The unemployment rate is expected to increase some in July because of an increase in vacations and in layoffs for inventory purposes. "I expect a temporary influx of people to come in but they'll eventually go back (to work)," Revane said. "It's good right now and it looks good for awhile, but I can't predict the future."

Congress to study student loan bills

by JOHN N. FRANK

Bills aimed at revamping the federal guaranteed student loan program so more lending institutions will make money available to students will be considered soon by both houses of Congress.

If passed, the measures will make more students eligible for the program and will entitle states such as Illinois, which has a low default rate on student loans, to more federal assistance in paying off defaults.

THE MAJOR CHANGES the bills would bring about are:

- A change in the eligibility requirement. Currently, students whose parents' income does not exceed $15,000 are eligible to get federal interest payment subsidies. This means students pay a 7 per cent interest rate on loans while the federal government pays the difference between 7 per cent and the currently accepted interest rate. The House bill would raise the maximum income to $20,000 in the coming fiscal year and $25,000 the following year. The Senate bill sets $25,000 as the new maximum income immediately.
- Greater incentives to states to establish efficient state guarantee programs. Currently, about half the states, including Illinois, have their own guarantee agencies. When a student would default on a state-administered loan, the federal government would reimburse the state 100 per cent if the state has a default rate of 7 per cent or lower under the new bill. Currently, states receive an 80 per cent reimbursement.
- A provision making it harder for students to default on guaranteed loans. Under provisions of the House bill, a student who declares bankruptcy less than five years after graduating still has to pay back his guaranteed loan.

Backers of this provision hope it will cut the rate of student defaults and encourage more lenders to take part in the program. Default rates as high as 25 per cent have meant "in some states the program exists in name only," said Carol Wennerdahl, director of the Illinois Guaranteed Loan program.

Begun in 1965, the federal loan program is "a program that everyone thought would be little used and suddenly it bloomed into one of the major sources of student financing," said Chuck Zuver of the American Bankers Association.

MORE THAN EIGHT million students borrowed a total of $8.9 billion under the federal program, but many defaulted on their loans. The default rate on federally guaranteed loans is 18 per cent, while the average default rate for state programs is 7 per cent, said Jim Harrison, a staffer on the House Subcommittee on Post-secondary Education where the House bill originated.

States have fewer borrowers to keep track of than the federal Office of Education and thus can do a better job of tracking delinquent loans, Harrison said.

Banks and other private lenders may be more willing to make loans if states are handling the program, bill backers believe.

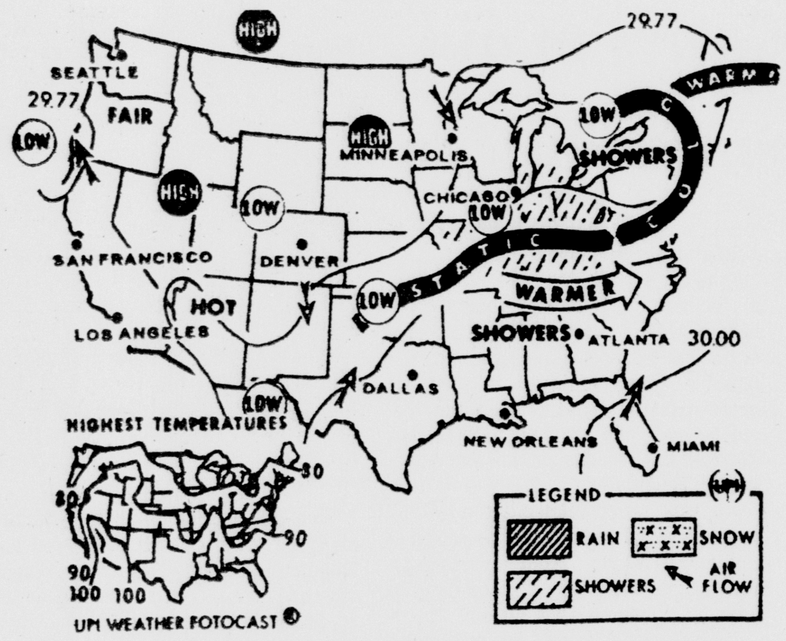

The key is to convince states they should establish guarantee agencies, Wennerdahl said. Illinois now pays 20 per cent of loans defaulted by state residents. States with no guarantee agency pay nothing when a state resident defaults, she said.

Under the new 100 per cent reimbursement provision, states that presently do not have guarantee agencies might establish them in order to encourage lenders to make more loans to state residents, she said.

The reimbursement provision is sure to meet opposition on the floor of the House, Wennerdahl said. Opponents of the provision believe it would encourage state agencies to slacken their efforts at tracking down delinquent loans because the state wouldn't lose money until the default rate reached 7 per cent.

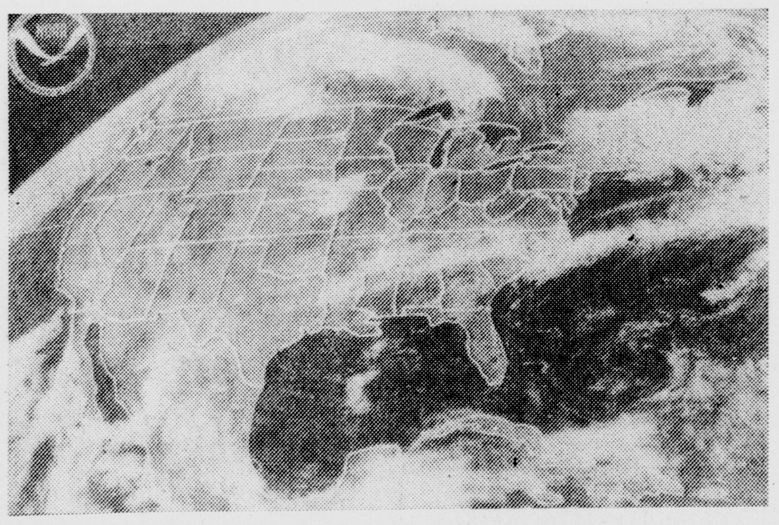

ANOTHER CONTROVERSIAL section of the House bill is the student bankruptcy provision. Rep. James G. O'Hara, D-Mich., chairman of the postsecondary education subcommittee, calls the bankruptcy provision "a direct, unmitigated slapin the face of every single student borrower in the nation. It assumes that borrower's bad intentions and deprives him of a right which every other citizen has available to him if he needs it."

Palestinian rebels hijack Air France jet

ATHENS, (UPI) — Palestinian guerrillas hijacked an Air France jetliner with 258 persons — including nine Americans — shortly after takeoff from Athens Sunday and diverted it to Benghazi, Libya. Air France said the plane later took off and after 5½ hours landed in Entebbe, Uganda.

An Air France official said the hijacked plane took off from Benghazi after refueling with all the passengers, except one British woman, suffering from an undisclosed illness, who was allowed to get off.

Eighty-three Israelis were among the passengers when the plane took off from Tel Aviv but Israeli Transport Minister Gad Yacobi said on national television there were only about 70 still aboard at the time of the hijack.

Yacobi said there were seven hijackers, five of them transit passengers who boarded in Tel Aviv.

The plane, Air France Flight 139 en route from Tel Aviv to Paris, was seized less than 30 minutes after the stopover in Athens.

Air France spokesmen said 246 passengers — including at least 9 Americans — and 12 crew members were aboard the 300B4 airbus at the time of the hijacking. The European-manufactured twin-jet plane carried 83 Israelis when it left Tel Aviv.

Air France said the hijackers identified themselves in Libya as members of the Popular Front for the liberation of Palestine — an extremist group that broke several years ago from the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Air France said Libyan army troops surrounded the plane when it landed at Benghazi. Libyan authorities boarded the plane several hours later to begin negotiations with the hijackers.

An Air France spokesman said the plane departed Ben-Gurion International Airport at Tel Aviv at 8:50 a.m. (1:50 a.m. CDT) with 223 passengers aboard.

The spokesman said 33 passengers disembarked at Athens but 56 new passengers boarded there, including 9 Americans.

"I would not be a bit surprised if the hijackers boarded in Athens," an airport official in Athens said.

He said the airport's western terminal, used for international flights, is in a state of chaos because of a strike of airport personnel.

"It is impossible to control passengers running from one section of the terminal to the next, passing into the transit area unchecked or unnoticed and in a position to hand over weapons to potential hijackers," the official said.

Greek police said a large number of Palestinian and Libyan visitors arrived in Athens in the past few weeks and security men suspected some of them may have been sent to Greece to prepare the hijacking.

Israeli Transport Minister Gad Yacobi in Tel Aviv denounced the hijacking as "a very grave incident and a violation of the elementary rules of civil aviation."

Fourth of July landing on Mars by Viking 1 delayed

PASADENIA, Calif. (UPI)—A July Fourth landing on Mars by Viking I has been scrapped because photographs indicate the planned landing site would be too hazardous, the project head at Jet Propulsion Laboratory said Sunday.

The landing was officially postponed late Saturday night following closer examination of photographs of the Martian surface.

"After careful examination of the landing site . . . we have decided the AI area that we have been planning on appears to have too many unknowns and could appear hazardous," said James S. Martin, Viking project manager.

"We are delaying the landing to examine additional sites."

Martin said some of the project scientists objected to the postponement, saying the photographs sent back by Viking 1 indicate the landing site is "satisfactory."

However, other scientists feared Viking 1 would be severely damaged by knobs, craters, debris blasted from craters and huge boulders.

Other landing sites will be examined, Martin said, beginning with a section northwest of the original site followed by the A2, B1 and C1 areas.

Martin said if examinations indicate A2, halfway across the planet from the original site, would be the best site, a touchdown could be expected July 22 or 23.

He said scientists are also looking for a possible landing site for Viking 2, which is hurling toward the red planet and scheduled to orbit Aug. 7 and land Sept. 4.

"It may turn out that after examination of the four areas we can conclude that we don't understand Mars at all . . . or that all areas of Mars are very likely to be bad in the sense of not being as good as we'd like," said Martin.

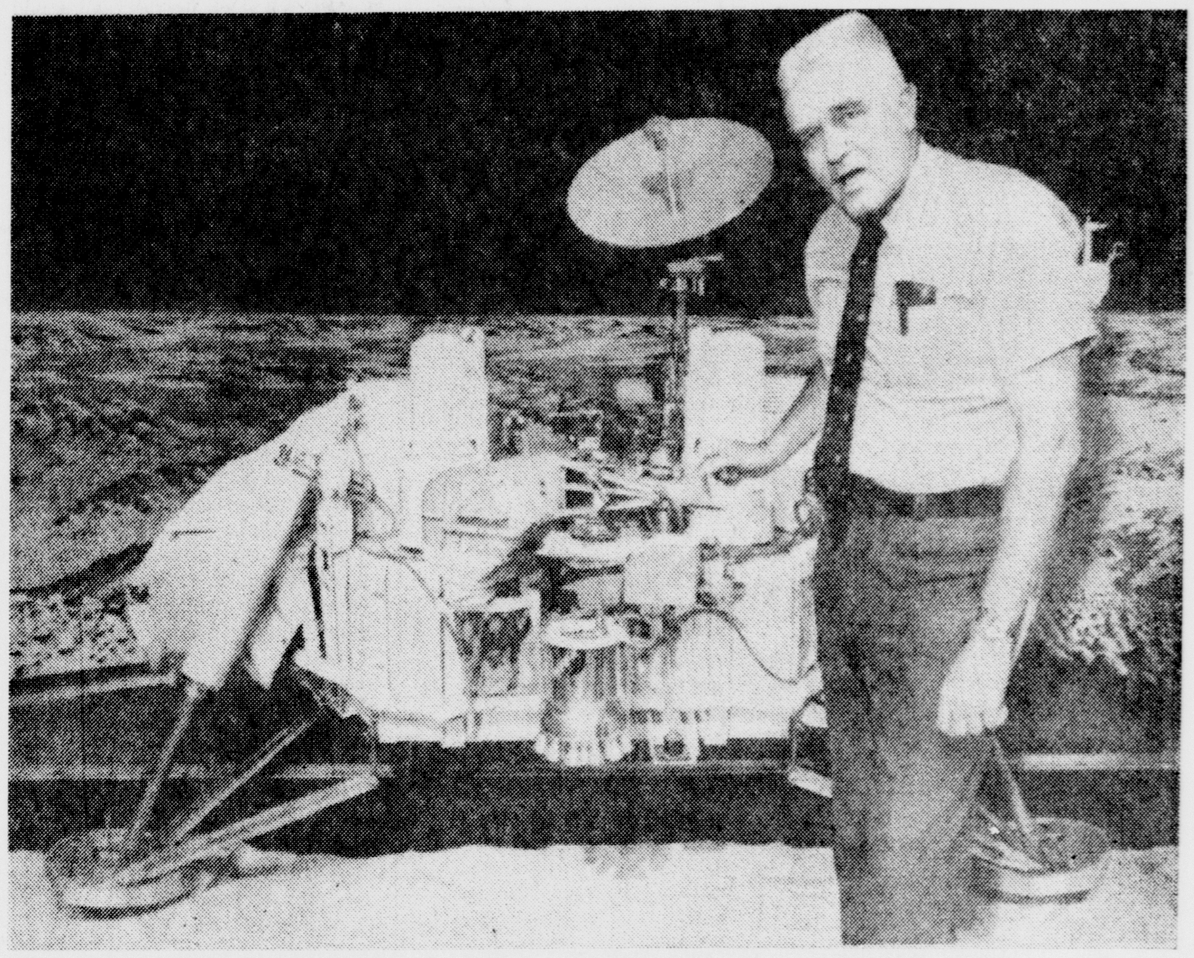

"One possible conclusion . . . is that all areas of Mars are likely to be rough and that's the kind of situation we will have to live with. In that case we can decide to go back to A1 and then would land somewhere between July 8 and 12.

"We have ruled out (a landing for the) Fourth of July. That opportunity is no longer with us. We believe we must examine the additional areas to increase our understanding of the planet."

If no landing site is found by the time Viking 2 is ready to go into orbit, Martin said, Viking 1's landing will have to be further delayed.

Martin said not one single factor motivated scientists' decisions to delay the landing.

"Things have gone fantastically well," said Martin. "I am disappointed as are many people. But we've always had in the back of our minds that Mars would not cooperate. And I would say it has not."

VIKING PROJECT MANAGER James S. Martin, standing before model of the Viking Mars lander, explains the planned July 4th Bicentennial landing has been postponed because photographs relayed to earth by the orbiter show the terrain of Mars too rough and hazardous at the landing sites.

Pay phone costs seen at 25 cents

The chairman of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. said Sunday a pay telephone call probably will cost a quarter in most places. John deButts also said home telephone bills would continue to rise if inflation returned to 6 per cent or more. Asked if pay phones would jump to a quarter, deButts told U.S. News and World Report, "Possibly." He said that in 14 states pay-booth rates have gone beyond 10 cents. "In a couple of states," deButts said, "we're asking for increases to 25 cents, but I don't know how good the prospects are." As for home phones, the AT&T chairman said, "We can stand an inflation rate of 3 to 4 per cent in a year and absorb it through improved productivity. But if we get inflation in the range of 6 to 7 per cent or more . . . then we'll have to ask for rate increases."

Congress girds for appropriation bills

Congress planned late-night sessions this week to pass appropriations needed to keep government agencies operating past June 30 and consider a tax bill to provide the money. House-Senate conferees will shuttle between conference rooms and the floors for votes. Some will appear on the floor after dark in tuxedoes, ready to dash to a party after the last vote. The Senate isn't holding hearings on other legislation at all under orders from Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, who hopes his last year won't be marked by the confusion that usually attends the budget process.

Unleash S. Africa struggle: OAU

Arab and African foreign ministers Sunday called for the "unleashing of the armed struggle" — Guerrilla war — against South Africa and threatened to boycott Western companies trading with South Africa. The ministers, at the annual meeting of the 47-nation Organization of African Unity, also threatened to boycott the summer Olympics in Montreal if New Zealand is allowed to compete. The OAU was angered because New Zealand sent a rugby football team to South Africa several days ago despite vehement protests from African nations.

1-mile path of death, destruction

Belgian train derails; 11 killed

NEUFVILLE, Belgium (UPI) — An Amsterdam-to-Paris express train loaded with tourists including some Americans derailed Sunday and smashed a path of death and destruction almost a mile down tracks buckled by an unusual heat wave.

At least 11 persons died, some torn apart as the coaches separated or turned over, and another 59 were injured, according to officials in this village 20 miles south of Brussels.

Most of the dead and injured were Dutch tourists on a group tour.

A black-haired American girl who refused to give her name walked up to a Red Cross worker, dazed and bloody, her face tearstreaked, and pleaded for help finding her girl travel mate who had been missing for two hours.

Neither Red Cross or U.S. Embassy officials had identified Americans among the dead.

Railway officials said "it was not ruled out" that the intense heat sweeping Europe had buckled the tracks, causing the train to sway before the rear cars jumped the tracks. But they declined to speculate on the reason for the accident.

The 12-coach train had left Brussels 30 minutes earlier, traveling through the parched but yet green farmlands of west-central Belgium.

Passengers said they felt the train sway — one said "For maybe five minutes" — before the last five carriages derailed, the fourth one from the end sliding on its side 200 yards up the track ahead of the last three. Most of the dead were in the overturned carriage, police said.

"I thought we were going over a high hill," said Emirne Tilborg of Paramaribo, Surinam. "Sand and stones flew into the window and the luggage came down. When we left the train, there was someone laying without a head outside our car."

Ford opens 7-nation economic summit

DORADO, Puerto Rico (UPI) — President Ford opened a seven-nation economic summit conference Sunday with an appeal to the leaders of the major non-Communist nations to shape the future rather than to react to problems after they arise.

Ford told the visiting heads of state from Western Germany, Japan, Great Britain, France, Italy and Canada that they were confronting mutual economic problems to provide "a more secure and prosperous world."

The leaders, flanked by their foreign and finance ministers, sat at a seven-sided table in a room at the Dorado Beach resort that overlooked the Atlantic Ocean.

As they met, thousands of Puerto Ricans massed outside the gates — and under heavy security — to demonstrate for independence of Puerto Rico, a Commonwealth of the United States.

The protestors were held behind fences and guarded by armed policemen spaced every 10 yards. Security forces were bolstered by a large contingent of White House policemen flown to Puerto Rico from Washington.

A second protest rally was staged in downtown San Juan, 20 miles east of Dorado.

"The complexity of our nations' economies, means that we as leaders cannot afford to allow major difficulties to arise and then, by dramatic meetings, attempt to resolve them," Ford said.

"It requires instead that we concert our efforts to prevent problems from arising in the first place — to shape the future rather than reacting to it."

Meeting with Ford were Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany, Prime Minister James Callaghan of Great Britain, Prime Minister Takeo Miki of Japan, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France, Caretaker Prime Minister Aldo Moro of Italy and Prime Minister Pierre Elliot Trudeau of Canada.

Trudeau and Giscard arrived Sunday. The others joined Ford Saturday.

The major topic on the agenda was how the seven nations can cooperate to prevent the current economic recovery from accelerating into another boom-bust cycle. It is a follow-up to a six-nation summit, to which Canada was not invited, at Rambouillet, France, last November.

Fighting engulfs Beirut; rockets destroy jetliner

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Rockets fired from right-wing Christian positions in the hills overlooking Beirut International Airport destroyed a Middle East Airline jet passenger plane Sunday, killing the four-man crew and forcing the airport to close.

Much of the city of Beirut was engulfed in new fighting which spread from the Christian Phalangists' six-day old siege of two Palestinian refugee camps into the business and port areas where house-to-house battles added to the terror of residents without power or water and threatened by typhoid epidemics.

The battle for the two refugee camps was in its sixth day and both sides agreed it was the heaviest fighting of the civil war that has taken somewhere between 20,000 and 30,000 lives. Estimates were that as many as 900 persons have died in the last six days of terror.

One Middle East Airlines Boeing 720 parked on the tarmac about 300 yards from the main terminal building was hit Sunday morning and was still sending thick billows of black smoke skyward an hour later. The pilot, Capt. Zuheir Mikati, was killed with three other crewmen.

The MEA plane was to have taken passengers aboard for a flight to Cairo. A fully loaded MEA plane also bound for Cairo had taxied past moments before. Two Saudi Arabian Air Force C130 troop transports parked nearby escaped damage. They were reported to have flown in medicine and the Saudi contingent of the multi-Arab peace force being sent to Beruit by the Arab League.

A pool report written by William Blakemore of ABC News and Christian Science Monitor said Western journalists standing in the entrance of the terminal building reported they saw the flash of the rockets fired from the foothills a couple of miles to the east and then watched the rockets streak to the airport. UPI reporters also reported the rockets came from Christian-held areas.

One Western cameraman said he filmed the rockets as they were taking off from the rightist controlled hills.

Health authorities warned of the danger of epidemics in Beirut where most water supplies are short and a quart of bottled water costs 60 cents. The Red Cross and hospitals stepped up their immunization campaign against the most feared disease, typhoid fever.

UPI reporters said they clearly saw rockets coming from a Christian area held by rightist Col. Antoine Barakat. He had threatened to shell the airport unless he was given inspection rights to ensure that no leftist arms shipments were arriving there.

Christian "Tiger" militiamen of former President Camille Chamoun poured artillery and machine gun fire into the besieged camps of Tal al Zaatar and Jisr al Pasha in southeastern Beirut for the sixth consecutive day. An estimated 3,000 heavy shells hit the camps in the past 24 hours.

Both sides suffered heavy casualties but both leftist and rightest reports said the heavily fortified camps were still holding out.

Truckers termed modern folk heroes

Pennsylvania Gov. Milton J. Shapp said in Chicago Sunday the lifestyle of truckers makes them "modern-day folk heroes" to many Americans. "Millions of Americans who want to be on their own, who resent the daily drudgery of uninspiring work, and who want to be free from the entanglements of big business organizations and big government, see trucking as an escape," he said in remarks prepared for a convention of independent truckers.

Shapp said many Americans look upon trucking as "a place where the little guy can still make a go of it." Shapp, who drove a coal truck during the depression, acknowledged, however, that because of rising costs for equipment, fuel and insurance the life of a trucker is not "all romance and glory." "The economics of trucking today makes it pretty tough to make ends meet," he said.

Malpractice coverage down

An American Medical Assn. poll indicates that one out of three U.S. doctors is considering "going bare," or letting his malpractice insurance lapse. The poll also showed that 13 per cent of the respondents currently were without malpractice insurance. Results of the poll, conducted by the AMA's Center for Health Services Research and Development, based in Chicago, appear in this week's issue of the American Medical News, a weekly newspaper for physicians. The poll indicated that 49 per cent of thessurgeons surveyed, 44 per cent of the obstetrician-gynecologists and 41 per cent of the psychiatrists said they are considering dropping their malpractice insurance. Pediatricians were least inclined to drop the insurance: only 13 per cent said they favored the idea.

Illinois briefs

Tongue-twistin' life with our legislators

Every year some of Illinois' lawmakers get their tongues wrapped around their tonsils and say things they don't mean. Here's this year's crop of verbal bobbles. "We're really speaking with a two-forked tongue," Rep. Samuel Maragos, D-Chicago, complained during a committee hearing. "What he's doing here is confusing the purported problem and throwing out the baby with the dirty water," Rep. Thomas Hanahan, D-McHenry, bellowed to an astounded House during debate on workmen's compensation legislation. Hanahan also left Conservation Director Tony Dean shaking his head during a committee meeting when he observed, "You somehow think the word 'conservation' means to conserve. I think it means 'to use.' "

Rep. Brian Duff, R-Wilmette, had all the bases covered when he noted, "We may or may not be perfect or imperfect in what we do today." Later in the spring he again stretched rhetoric to the breaking point by saying debate "goes on constantly and forever." Rep. Fred Schraeder, D-Peoria, also straddled the fence when he noted, "I think this House is on the verge of doing something great or something less than that." Rep. Clyde Choate, complaining about overlapping committee schedules, told his chairman at peak volume, "You can't be in two places at once forever."

Later, Choate noted there were few members present at a meeting and that cooperation between parties would be needed to pass any legislation. As he phrased it, however, "There has got to be a certain amount of courtesy in this House, especially when some members have relieved themselves of this chamber." "These school districts are having fiscal problems, financial and otherwise," Rep. Joseph Lucco, D-Edwardsville, sagely told the chamber.

Search on for shooting suspect

Aurora police armed with a murder warrant Sunday sought William Falkner, 31, in connection with a barroom shooting in which one man died and a woman was wounded. Authorities said George Bell, 51, was killed in the shooting which broke out during an argument Saturday night at an American Legion Hall on the city's East Side. Witnesses told police that Falkner drew a revolver and, when the management tried to disarm him, he threatened the bartender. He allegedly fired three shots, one striking Bell and the other wounding a woman patron.

5 cars entered, gear taken during weekend

Thieves in Arlington Heights broke into five cars during the weekend and stole eight-track stereo tapes and Citizens' Band radios, police reported Sunday.

Thieves struck twice in one night at the parking lot of the Northpoint Shopping Plaza, Rand and Arlington Heights roads, police said.

Between 10:30 p.m. Friday and 3:15 a.m. Saturday, thieves stole a Citizens' Band radio valued at $50, a $45 antenna and 72 eight-track tapes valued at.$360 from a car owned by Rick Kuhl of Arlington Heights, police said.

During the same period, police said thieves stole 48 eight-track tapes valued at $240 from a car owned by Tick Wille, also of Arlington Heights.

BOTH INCIDENTS occurred at the shopping center. Police said thieves shattered auto windows to gain entry.

Between 10:30 and 11:15 p.m. Friday, police said thieves broke into a garage at the George N. Tautz residence, Arlington Heights, and stole a CB radio valued at $250 and a police department monitor adapter valued at $45 from Tautz' car.

Thieves Friday night stole a CB radio from the car of Andrew S. Neilson, of Oregon, Wis., after Neilson had parktd his auto at Arlington Park Race Track, police said. Value of the radio was not given.

Thieves also entered an unlocked truck owned by Chalet Ford, 801 W. Dundee Rd., Arlington Heights, and stole a public-service band tranceiver valued at $856 Thursday or Friday, police said.

Reagan delegate total increased by 45 in West and the Georgian beating Regan in the region 63 to 30 per cent. The 13 southern states provide one third of the electoral votes needed to win the presidency.

But Democratic National Committee Chairman Robert Strauss said Sunday, "My knowledge of Jimmy Carter is he won't read the polls and relax." Strauss, interviewed on NBC's Meet the Press, predicted the general election will be closer than the polls indicate.

The GOP fight became more bitter in recent days, with Reagan charging Ford with a "desperate attempt" to change the rules in convention states in his favor and the Ford committee charging Reagan's people with purging elected GOP officials from delegate positions.

REAGAN SAID HE does not believe the Ford campaign's "plea of party unity is a reason for changing the rules of the convention."

The Ford people, on the other hand, have complained about Reagan's tactics of excluding widely known GOP officeholders from delegations by using their control of state conventions to determine who the Ford representatives will be and to keep the officials from going to the convention even as Reagan delegates.

In New Mexico, for instance, Sen. Pete Domenici, Rep. Manuel Lujan and U.S. Treasurer Francine Neff, were kept from going to Kansas City as delegates. bsens. Barry Goldwater, Paul Fannin and John Tower, Govs. James Holshouser of North Carolina and Dan Evans of Washington and a host of congressmen and state GOP chairmen were excluded from other delegations, which a Ford committee spokesman said "will make unification much more difficult."

Pres. Ford

Ronald Reagan

The reason for Reagan backers' attempts to keep their own people in the delegations, even if they are committed to vote for Ford, is that many delegates are bound only for one or two ballots. After that they become free agents, and the more people who favor Reagan, the better his chances after a first-ballot deadlock.

The convention could go beyond one ballot only if states withhold their votes the first time.

New traffic plans set near park

Special traffic patterns will be put into effect in the vicinity of Recreation Park beginning Wednesday because of Bicentennial activities scheduled there.

"One-way traffic will be necessary to provide parking along narrow streets in the vicinity of the park," Village Engineer Allen Sander said.

"Parking will be prohibited in many areas and greatly restricted in others because many of the older streets are so narrow," Sander said.

The Arlington Heights Police Dept. is recommending that residents going to the various Bicentennial activities at Recreation Park use the shuttle bus service from the commuter parking lots in the downtown area, Police Sgt. Jack Weber said.

"WE REALIZE the special traffic routes are going to cause some temporary inconveniences, but we hope to keep them to a minimum," Weber said.

The special traffic routes will be in effect until July 6, he said.

Plans call for the following changes in traffic patterns: between Douglas Avenue and Arlington Heights Road, Fremont and Eastman streets will be one-way westbound and St. James Street will be one-way eastbound; Douglas Avenue will be one-way northbound between Euclid Avenue and Northwest Highway and will be closed between Kensington Road and Miner Street; Haddow Avenue will be one-way southbound between Euclid Avenue and Miner Street; Belmont Avenue will be one-way northbound between Euclid Avenue and Miner Street and will be closed between Miner and Wing streets; and Pine Avenue will be one-way northbound between Miner Street and Northwest Highway and one-way southbound between Euclid Avenue and Miner Street.

68-year-old man dies while changing van tire

A 68-year-old Crystal Lake man died of an apparent heart attack while changing a tire on his van on Northwest Highway near Palatine Plaza, Palatine, late Saturday.

Palatine police said Walter Mushell, 3602 Barreville Rd., died sometime between 10:25 and 10:55 p.m. Saturday.

Mushell had pulled onto the shoulder of the highway after he noticed his van's left rear wheel was loose, police said. He declined the aid of a passing patrolman, who spoke to Mushell at 10:25 p.m., police saaid.

Mushell had jacked up his van to tighten the lug nuts of the tire's wheel, police sid.

A passing motorist reported seeing Mushell lying unconscious next to his van shortly before 11 p.m., police said. Palatine paramedics arrived too late to revive Mushell.

Mushell's body was transported to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, where it was pronounced dead on arrival, police said.

Neighbors later identified the body, which was transported Sunday to the Cook County Morgue, Chicago.

Participation cuts tension

Robert Birchfield made a campaign promise in the April election to bring more openness and communication between the Des Plaines Dist. 62 Board of Education and the community — a promise we feel he must not renege on.

Birchfield ran for his second term on a platform of changing the Dist. 62 board so that the people in the district would have more access to their elected representatives.

This week Birchfield cast a vote against allowing the public to address the board at the beginning of the regular meetings and, we feel, fudged on his campaign stand.

The normally uneventful April election became a heated contest in Dist. 62 after a March meeting when the board approved more than $700,000 in budget cuts and an audience of about 500 was not allowed to speak until after the vote.

Write-in candidates surfaced and the major campaign issue became the lack of communications in the district. In his candidate interview with The Herald, Birchfield said he had had second thoughts on whether he deserved to be a board member and pledged himself to making changes on the board and responding to the citizenry.

Since the election, an average of 100 persons has attended meetings, and there have been frequent incidents when angry comments, boos and applause came from the audience.

The community has always had the opportunity to be included on the board agenda for meetings by contacting the district a week in advance, and more recently a public participation session has been scheduled immediately before adjournment.

We believe the earlier public participation session is a good idea and that it will help the board and community improve their relations.

The three board members who voted "no" on the change, Birchfield, Board Pres. Stuart Kisten and Wallace Meyer, expressed a fear that the meetings would get out of hand, become unruly or go too long. Kisten said there had already been changes made to improve communications and, if they fail, early participation should be considered.

There is an antagonism growing between the board and an angry block of residents. The board should do everything in its power to eliminate this antagonism by proving to all residents that they do care, will listen and are responsive.

Many other boards introduced early participation in their meetings long before there was a crisis, and it has worked well. Some of these boards even allow the public to ask questions during their regular meetings, dispensing with Roberts Rules of Order in favor of community relations.

We are disappointed with Birchfield's vote and expect better of him in the future.

Bargaining law and harmony

Your editorial of June 17, "Need reason on both sides," touches upon several points which should be embellished upon. You offer a solution of the Illinois General Assembly legislating public employe collective bargaining laws to establish ground rules. This certainly would be a progressive step forward, however, it must be pointed out that no enacted statute can create an atmosphere of good faith negotiations between the public employer and the public employes. This atmosphere of honest and sincere negotiations between the interested parties is one that only they themselves can institute.

Your statement that the General Assembly has viewed public employe lective bargaining laws unfavorably is erroneous. Certain interested forces, such as the Daley-backed legislators and conservative Republicans in the Senate, have been successful in keeping any bill from being enacted to this date. By and large however, it has been the policy of the State of Illinois to approve public employe collective bargaining. Illinois is one of the few major northern industrial states that still lacks a collective bargaining bill.

IN THE WHEELING situation, your editorial is correct for indicating that a strained climate exists. The police and firemen of this community have continuously acted responsibly, while the political officials have not. The actions of the village trustees, until now, can only be categorized as callous, unresponsive and creative of the present volatile state of affairs. The employes have constantly requested meetings, while the trustees violate previous agreements and take actions to eliminate employe benefits, such as their credit union.

Labor negotiations within a democratic society will always remain an adversary relationship. It does not, however, have to be an antagonistic one. Harmonious relationships, with mechanisms for dispute solving, can be established. The impediment to such relationships has always been the Kingly attitude of political officials and a servile posture toward their emplyes.

It is almost history repeating itself, as politicians act like the corporate magnates of times past. Hopefully, they too will become part of the twentieth century and realize that the right to collective bargaining and worker self-representation is an integral part of our democracy and one which assists the democratic process of our country to continue to function.

Hays preoccupation wrong

During the past several weeks, thousands of words in print and hundreds of feet of newsfilm have been used to determine whether Wayne Hays had a personnel or personal relationship with Elizabeth Ray. The amount of taxpayers' money involved was $14,000 and Hays and/or Ray should make restitution. Case closed; however, the coverage continues.

While all of this was going on, a little-publicized fact appeared in a filler item in the newspaper. With the spotlights directed elsewhere, Congress is taking up the major appropriation bills during the month of June. Last week the House approved new spending at a level of $146 billion. This week, the total level of the bills to be passed will add another $115 billion to the federal budget. In addition, the House increased the "temporary" debt ceiling to $700 billion less than two weeks ago. That is the second or third increase since the start of this year alone. Who knows how many special interest favors lie hidden in these bills? What new inflationary pressures will mount at a time when the inflation rate is again creeping up after leveling off for a few short months? How much will the new debt figure cost us in interest each year?

THE FACT REMAINS that until we rearrange our priorities for public coverage, these questions will remain unanswered. As a result we can expect more of the same wateful spending and rising taxes.

More real damage has been done in the appropriations process in Congress the last two weeks than Elizabeth Ray could ever hope to inflict during her "service" to the Congress. But, alas, nothing is said of it.

John E. Shelk

There are good congressmen

What do the following men have in common? Al Quie, Phil Crane, Hubert Humphrey, Chuck Percy, Walter Mondale.

At least two things: they are all members of Congress; none of them have ever been tainted by any kind of personal scandal. And that nowadays seems to be at least a moderate triumph of civilized man.

The reputation of Congress has hit an all-time low. We unfold our daily newspaper and read all about the latest misconduct of some high official. Seldom do we spotlight those who are always, and only, involved in honorable activities.

Congress is today populated with as many fine people as at any time in the past. We are truly fortunate to have many highly principled men and women willing to run for public office. Especially since the pressures of public office are far greater today than ever before.

I have met four of the five representatives and senators named above. Regardless of party affiliation, they represent us remarkably well.

Thoroughfare plan adoption hit

In regards to the Arlington Heights Village Board meeting on June 21, I was surprised that trustees were so readily and able to vote their approval on the thoroughfare plan.

Especially when Mr. Kesler, their own traffic planner, indicated that Sgt. Webber and Mr. Spiegel were looking into the possibility of boulevard classification f some of our streets. My commendation to Mr. Barboro, Mr. Palmatier and Mr. Ryan for showing thoughtful consideration as to the validity of passage of this plan at this time. As for the rest of the board, I am wondering whether the request for "resident input" was a sincere one or was just a formality — hopefully not to be taken seriously.

Furthermore, my commendation to Mr. Durava, who, unable to find supporting opinion among residents present at the meeting, was so conscientiously representing the 79,000 residents who "hopefully" were for this plan. However, may I point out that at least one-half of them are children who don't appreciate dodging cars on streets that are to be improved for the accomodation of traffic flow, mainly in the east-west direction. Why?

Will sprinkling rules protect new lawns?

I would like to comment on the sprinkling ban which several people seem to think is a good idea. While limiting the water supply to those of you with strong, healthy lawns might be a good idea, and insure water for generations, what's to be done about those of us with new lawns? We are in the process of seeding our lawn, and great care must be taken to keep the ground wet. If we are limited to the proposed two days a week, we will have no lawn to water. Wouldn't it be possible to issue three-month special tickets for those whose lawns are just beginning? So officials, when and if you pass this law, please make some amends for those of us without green and healthy yards.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 28 — A British squadron under Adm. Samuel Parker tried to run the channel to Charleston by the American fortifications at Sullivan's Island. After a 10-hour fray, the British warships withdrew with several ships severely damaged and Adm. Parker's breeches blown off by an American shell. The British casualties were 261 wounded and killed, including fatally wounded South Carolina Gov. Campbell. American forces sustained 12 dead and 23 wounded.

'No one so bad he's unpopular'

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Presumably you've heard the one about Elizabeth Ray when she was still, ah, in the employment of foul-tempered Wayne Hays. She went to the doctor one day and he asked her if she had awakened grouchy that morning. "No," she replied, "I let him go on sleeping."

You haven't heard? Strange. One guesses by now that almost everything is known about America's sweetheart. They are even dragging out the old Barry Goldwater gag: "Any man would be foolish to mess with his secretary. If it's somebody else's secretary, fine."

It is, unfortunately, too much to expect the nation to quietly ignore Liz Ray, or to relegate her with the other tramps to the flop houses on the dark side of familiarty. Since crime pays, we are obligated to reward her with fame and fortune. While the object of her affections nearly dies in disgrace from an overdose of sleeping pills, she basks in the happy hoo ha. Skin magazines throw money at her, television has gotten more cleavage than footage, even her dear mother, who judiciously declines precise identification has been asked to contribute notes to the saga of the Bicentennial belle.

Crime Pays? Well, not in all cases. In America if you steal a loaf of bread you get 10 years; if you steal something disgusting, such as democracy, you get on the Johnny Carson show. In other words we choose celebrities on the flimsiest of reasons.

REMEMBER Lt. William Calley? According to the verdict of the court he was responsible for the murder of no fewer than 22 helpless Vietnamese civilians. The news of this naturally made him the stuff of legend in the U.S. True, he served a few brief months in prison, but today people still send him small contributions through the mails.

And then there is Clifford Irving. He wrote a phoney book about Howard Hughes some years ago, accepting nearly a half million dollars for it under decidedly illegal pretenses. The crime was not only against his wife, whom he dragged into the bog, and his children, who have been stigmatized for life for his greed, but it was as well a crime against everyone. The man with the gun can rob a wallet, but the thug with a pen can make trust, truth and intellectual stability.

Irving is now one of America's more successful authors. His book is being turned into a film extravaganza. He will next year host a television special concerned with the "World's Greatest Hoaxes." What's more, he has won the right to have his "Howard Hughes" account published. In seven languages. Including English. Does anyone doubt that when it appears in the United States, along with bombilations and paid propaganda, it will sell in the many millions of copies?

Psychologists can explain this absurdity of the celebrity crook, no doubt. We need our villains, as Karl Menninger says, not only as scapegoats but as objects to carry out the awful activities that excite and stimulate us. Hence we remember John Dillinger more than Melvin Purvis. Spiro Agnew will be in the Sunday supplements when Nelson Rockefeller is just a name on the Albany, N.Y. mall. If Hitler were alive today in Manhattan he would need a business manager.

I recall once in Salt Lake City when an assignment necessitated my living with two college coeds and a rehabilitated alcoholic. It was perfectly innocent, more's the pity, but at first the girls did not even want to be in the same room with the old rummy. Then he told us he was not simply a boozer, but a boozer of note; a member of the gang that pulled the Brink's armored car robbery in Boston. Immediately the girls' attitude toward him changed. And from there on he couldn't shake them. They were enthralled, starstruck, in absolute awe.

THE BUM wasn't a Brink's robber, of course. He used that lie to convert himself from nobody to somebody. He hadn't said he was a former presidential aide, or a former astronaut. Ironically, and ominously, he knew he could get more attention by being a former thief.

So it goes in the Union. There is no one so bad, too foul that he can't be popular. John Dean is going to report on politics this summer for a magazine. And a Washington whore dictates to all ears about morality.

Getting $$ worth on used-car buy

Speaking dollar-wise

by Robert S. Rosefsky

"Would you buy someone else's headache?"

That's probably the most common question — answered in the negative — that deters us from buying a used car. There's a general assumption, often erroneous, that no one gets rid of a car unless it's loaded with problems.

While this may be true in many cases, people do frequently trade in their cars every two or three years as a matter of habit, even if they're in fine condition. Also, many folks will get rid of an old car wrongly thinking that it has serious problems, when in fact it may only have simple flaws, easily correctible.

CASE IN POINT: a non-automotive-minded friend observed some strange malfunctions in his car's electrical system. One mechanic diagnosed it as a serious problem and suggested a complete overhaul of the system, for a $60 to $100 tab. This almost convinced the friend to trade the car in, but another mechanic found the real problem: a 20-cent fuse had blown and needed replacement.

Some careful shopping can disclose good used-car buys, and substantial transportation dollars can be saved. But if you're like most folks, including myself, you'll need the advice of a trusted mechanic to evaluate the condition of the car; and a visit to a body shop or two might also be in order. Paying a reasonable fee to such fellows can help insure that you're getting the best buy for your money.

Many areas of normal wear and tear can be cosmetically covered thus giving the used car a better appearance than it had on trade-in day. While the profit margin to the dealer may not allow him to do a complete overhaul, he can, at minimal cost, disguise anh of the worn-and-torn aspects.

Examples: new covers on the brake and clutch pedals can make them look good as new, when in fact very worn pedals can indicate excessive wear on the brakes and clutch. A quick steam-cleaning of the engine can make it sparkle, when in fact it may sputter when put to use. A cleanup of the battery may look reassuring to an uninformed buyer, when in fact much of the wiring in the system may be worn or corroded, spelling troubles in the future.

Hidden under cosmetic retouching may be more serious flaws that your own mechanic or body shop can detect. Ripples and dents may have been retouched and covered up — they may not have been serious, but a substantial whack could have caused severe internal problems that may not surface until after your warranty has expired. A body shop examination might be able to determine if such is the case.

POOR MAINTENANCE by the previous owner, perhaps even undetected by the dealer, could mean costly problems for you: for example, lack of proper care could mean an early demise for the braking system, the transmission, even the engine itself. Your mechanic, testing the car both at rest and on the road, should be able to pinpoint future dangers, and the cost of fixing them, either before or after the problem occurs.

Check the warranty most carefully. Some dealers may offer an extended plan, for an added fee, which could remove many potential headaches. If they do offer an extended plan, there's a good chance they'll put the car into better running condition in order to minimize claims on the extended warranty.

Gas price hike expected for holiday

Another holiday weekend is coming up, complete with rising gasoline prices.

Holiday-bound motorists will find more than ever that it pays to shop for gasoline prices, said Herbert Hugo, senior editor of the Platt's Oilgram industry publication, Chicago. Hugo said a new, surprising trend in the gasoline market is the split in area leaded and unleaded fuel price patterns.

"There are severe price wars in leaded gas," Hugo said. "Some dealers even lowered their price. But what's happening is that if you pull into a station and ask for unleaded gas, you might pay six to 10 cents more a gallon." The traditional spread between the fuel prices was two cents a gallon.

PUMP PRICES probably will climb one to two cents a gallon during the next week, the petroleum expert said. "It's not a case of getting gypped. It's a case of new supply relationships," he said.

An ample supply of gasoline for the July 4 holiday is forecast by Ken Curtis, Amoco Oil Co. marketing vice president, Chicago. Some spot shortages in heavily traveled areas could develop, he said. Increased demand for gasoline "may mean more imports at a higher price," said Amoco representative Jim Stollard.

Northwest suburban service station owners report an adequate gasoline supply for the summer driving season and some price increases. Jim Service, owner of the Arco station at the corner of Campbell Avenue and Wilke Road, Arlington Heights, said the wholesale price he pays for fuel rose three cents a gallon during the past month. "It seems like a constant thing," he said Friday.

Jim Karasis, dealer at the Clark service station, 1580 Algonquin Rd., Schaumburg, said he wouldn't be surprised to be notified of a gasoline price hike before the holiday weekend. Persons are driving more this year than in 1975, he said. "It's going to come to more money or an allocation." Karasis said the public thinks gas prices are "a big ripoff. What hurts is they think it's the dealer's fault."

NO NEW PRICE increases or supply problems are expected by Rob McCue, manager of the Walden-Woodfield Mobil station, Schaumburg.

Martin Pucci, owner of the Rolling Meadows Texaco outlet, said he absorbed a half-cent a gallon wholesale price hike Friday without passing along the cost to customers.

Chicago Motor Club Fuel Gauge Report figures released Thursday showed the average pump price for regular gas in Cook County is 61.6 cents a gallon compared to 61.3 cents two weeks earlier. Premium fuel costs rose to 66.8 cents. For the first time, the report said some area stations are charging more than 70 cents a gallon for premium gasoline.

Read the fine print in your passbook and find out if you're losing money.

Some people think you earn the same amount of interest on your money no matter where you save.

Don't you believe it.

Ground rules vary considerably from one savings institution to another. And the differences may be costing you money. More every year.

Check over the regulations in your regular passbook account, for example. Does it pay you 5¼% interest? Or just 5%? Is your interest compounded daily? Or quarterly?

Does your money earn interest from day of deposit to day of withdrawal? Or must you leave it in until the end of the quarter in order to be paid?

Are there limits on how much you can save?*

And what about an extra "grace period" for deposits? Does money in by the 10th of the month earn from the 1st when left on deposit until the end of the quarter?

Chances are your present savings account may be short-changing you in many or all of these areas. Which is why it pays to save at Chicago's largest.

Al Geiberger wins 73rd Western Open

by PAUL LOGAN

OAK BROOK — There was only one eal winner at the Western Open here unday — Butler National.

Rated at 78.3 (the highest in the ountry), it lived up to its billing as he toughest stop on the pro tour.

The best players in the world failed o break par.

Only veteran Al Geiberger managed o survive on this 7002-yard monster o take the 73rd annual tourney with a our-over-par 288 Sunday. It was the ighest winning total of the 26 tour tops this year.

Geiberger, who said earlier in the eek that being patient was the key ere, personified that. After sustaing a double bogey on the fourth hole, e trailed leader Bob Dickson by sevn strokes. The 38-year-old pro was Ir. Cool after that, despite the swelering heat and pressure.

The rest of the way he played near- perfect golf, catching Dickson, his laying partner, on the 14th. Dickson, ho had led for three days, totally ollapsed with a double bogey after ooking into Teal Lake with his drive. eiberger birdied, leaving him two ver and Dickson four over.

Then Geiberger made Joe Porter III is next target. Porter, who has never on in nine years, was played just head and nursing a two-over-par figre.

Both pros matched pars on the 15th nd 16th. Then Porter faltered, bogeyng the 17th and double bogeying the 8th.

Geiberger, using the experience hat has earned him nearly $1 million nd 10 tour titles, parred the 17th and eeded only a bogey to win the $40,000 rst prize.

But he didn't know that.

"I had a shot at the green," said eiberger, after placing his drive in he rough on the right. "And at that oint I thought I was tied for the lead. hen I asked one of the PGA officials nd he said no that Porter had double ogeyed. So that changed my whole ame plan right there.

"When they told me that he had ouble bogeyed, I said, 'Wait a minte now. It must have been written on the wall all along that you were supposed to win this tournament and you didn't know it, so just lay it up.' "

He ran a six iron to within a sand wedge of the green and then barely hit it over the back edge. Porter had also gone over in the earlier threesome and wound up in Salt Creek.

"Sometimes when you do something like that — knocking it over the green — you just want to kill yourself," said Geiberger, who has now earned over $152,000 this year, moving him into third place. "Of course it makes a good tournament on television, but it's hard on your nerves.

He chipped to within three feet from where he tapped in what he called "a real kneeknocker" for his second championship this year. He won the Greater Greensboro earlier.

Geiberger came into Sunday's finale tied for second with Charles Coody at 215, five shots behind Dickson. Coody dropped out of contention early and then rallied to finish right behind runner-up Porter's 289 with 290. Also tied at 290 were 1975 Western Open champ Hale Irwin and Dickson.

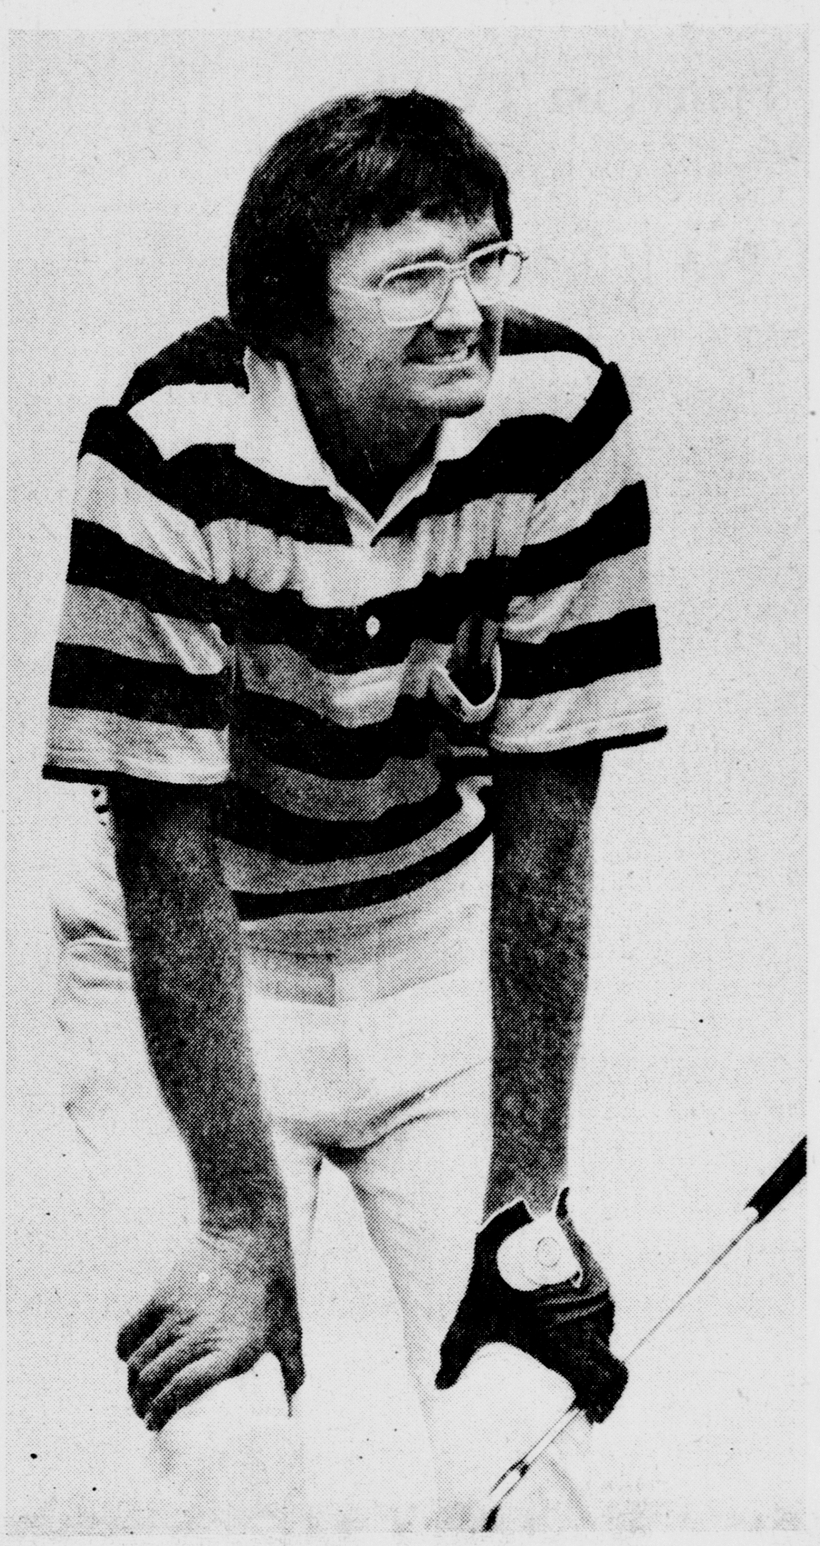

The front nine truly tested the new champion. He bogeyed the first hole. After a birdie on the third, he double bogeyed the fourth, taking two shots to get out of a trap near the green. He also bogeyed the seventh.

Gtiberger then pulled off a shot that he called his "big lift" of the day. His five iron placed the ball five feet from the cup on the picturesque but potent par 3 eighth. That birdie fired him up for the tension-filled back nine.

From the ninth through the 13th he carded pars. Meanwhile, Dickson was struggling. Geiberger birdied the 14th after his wedge second shot put him 14 feet from the cup.

Pars at 15, 16 and 17 set up his final safe bogey on the 18th — a hole that has cost many a player the tournament during the three years it has been held here.

The victory was worth a lot more than the $40,000 first prize. Geiberger has now qualified for the World Series of Golf — now a 72-hole competition for world class champions (Sept. 2-5) at Firestone CC.

LOOK, THEN look away. Bob Dickson, who led the Western Open for the first three rounds, takes a look at one of his shots on the fifth hole Sunday, then looks away. Dickson faded in the final round and ended up tied for third when everything was over. Also finishing third was Hale Erwin, last year's champ, and Charles Coody. All three shot 290s.

THE CHAMP. Al Geiberger came from behind to win the Western open with a 4-over-par 288 Sunday at the Butler National golf course in Oakbrook. The 38-year-old pro caught leader Bob Dickson on the 14th hole, then went on to win, aided by Joe Porter III, who bogeyed the 17th and double-bogeyed the 18th to finish second.

Finley saga rolls along as A's call off strike threat

From Herald Wire Services

Oakland A's owner Charlie Finley, citing "the best interests of baseball," yielded Sunday to player demands that he activate outfielder Joe Rudi and pitchers Vida Blue and Rollie Fingers, thus preventing a strike by the rest of his team.

"It is imperative for the welfare of the players involved, baseball and baseball fans that I take action that will prevent the disruption of the game," Finley told newsmen shortly after his A's took the field against the Minnesota Twins in Oakland.

The A's had threatened to strike unless Finley returned the three stars, Joe Rudi, Vida Blue and Rollie Fingers, to the active roster. Finley said he made the decision because he had been advised that a federal court judge would not act on a lawsuit affecting their status until Aug. 2.

Finley recently sold the three A's, all of whom elected to play out their options this year and become free agents, to the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees in multi-million dollar deals that shocked the sports world. However, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn nullified the sales, returning the players to Oakland in what he called the best interests of baseball.

With game time only five minutes away, Finley, from his Chicago office, issued a statement saying, "Since all members of the American League have agreed not to protest any of the games in which these players (Joe Rudi, Rollie Fingers and Vida Blue) will appear, I have decided to acquiesce to Commissioner (Bowie) Kuhn's directive regarding the playing of the three players already sold by the Athletics."

Finley said his $10 million suit filed against Kuhn and baseball last week in protesting the sale ban would not get under way before Aug. 2.

"It is imperative for the welfare of the players involved, baseball and baseball fans that I take action that will prevent the disruption of the game," he said.

"Since all members of the American League have agreed not to protest games in which these players appear, I have decided to acquiesce," Finley said at the news conference.

"I am in complete sympathy with the three players involved — especially since it is through no fault of theirs that this situation has occurred."

The strike would have been only the second in regular season major league history and, ironically, both actions involved the A's. In 1912, Detroit refused to take the field against the Philadelphia A's in protest of the suspension of Ty Cobb and it resulted in the Tigers fielding a makeshift lineup of collegians and semi-pro players. Without today's stringent player and game rules, the game was played and ended in a 24-2 victory for the A's.

The suspense as to whether Sunday's game would be played began building 90 minutes before the first pitch was thrown because Tanner ordered the clubhouse doors locked. Moments before Finley's statement was released, a loud roar came through the doors and the A's players, smiling, ran out on to the field.

They were greeted by cheers from the fans.

Geiberger's experience key to Open victory

by PAUL LOGAN

OAKBROOK — If one reason had to be given as to why Al Geiberger won the 73rd Western Open here Sunday, it would have to be experience.

"Who was it that wrote that it was a ho-hum tournament?" asked Geiberger as he held court in the Butler National press room. "Raise your hand. All I've got to say is you haven't watched enough tournaments.

"It looked like it from the outside when you see five shots or whatever it is, but the pros know different. They know you can lose 5, 6 or 7 shots easily. Usually when a player leads by three or four shots, most of the time he loses that lead during the final round and wins it back the majority of the time."

Geiberger poked fun at one of the Chicago writers who wrote the tourney off, giving Bob Dickson the victory after he held a five-stroke lead Saturday night. But Geiberger, a shrewd 17-year veteran, hadn't conceded anything to Dickson, who hasn't won since 1973.

"I wasn't rooting against Dickson because Bob's a good friend of mine," said Geiberger, who was paired with the three-round leader for the final, tension-packed 18 holes.

"I really would have liked to have seen him win. It looked like I wanted him to win the way I was going there. Everytime I had a chance to do something the last few days, it seemed like I would miss a putt or miss a shot or bogey a hole. I just did something that left me back of him too far.

"One of the hardest things is to get way out in front and sustain a lead like that and keep going. Especially on this course . . . It can jump right up and grab you."

Dickson at one time held a seven-stroke lead on Geiberger after he double bogeyed the par 4 fourth hole. The new champ said his game plan was to be more conservative. When he left it and tried to go for the win, he found the trap. His next shot stayed in the bunker when he tried to finesse it too much.

"This course is so tough that everytime you try to go at it (shooting for the pins), you get nailed. You need good shots, but you can't get bold and aggressive here. But I didn't think it (his conservative game plan) was going to work. Then, all of a sudden, I was in the lead there and I just couldn't believe it. I've had weeks where I've

White Sox end road trip with win over Rangers

From Herald Wire Services

DALLAS tex. — The White Sox, still smarting from a tough 1-0 loss in 10 innings to the Rangers the night before, finished up a nine-game road trip here Sunday with an unusual night starting time.

The Sox beat the Rangers, 6-2.

Bart Johnson started on the mound for the Sox while the veteran Nelson Briles made the start for the Rangers.

The Sox needed a win to gain a split in the four-game series with the rangers. Veeck's Wrecks enjoy the day off today before opening a week-long homestand against California and Texas, starting Tuesday night.

Both Johnson and Briles were tough in the early going as each had allowed two hits through four innings.

The Sox got to Briles for four runs in the fifth inninggg to take the lead.

Jack Brohamer walked to lead off and Kevin Bell followed by beating out a bunt. Rich Coggins was out on an infield tap, which advanced the runners to second and third.

Bucky Dent then bounced a single up the middle, driving in two runs, his 22nd and 23rd of the season. Chet Lemon followed with an RBI triple to score Dent with the third Sox run.

Lemon's hit broke an 0-for-25 slump for the Sox centerfielder.

Jorge Orta followed with a walk, the fourth given up by Briles. Pat Kelly then hit a double play ball to the second baseman Randle, who booted it and just got Kelly at first. But the fourth Sox run came home as Lemon crossed the plate on the play.

The Sox added two more in tht sixth when Kevin Bell chased Briles by hitting his third home run of the year, a two-run shot. Bell, who's not even 21 yet, hit close to .350 on the road trip and all three of his homers have come during that time.

Steve Hargan came in to relieve Briles and got the final two outs.

Ralph Garr, who was hitting over .300 on the trip, was not in the starting lineup Sunday and will be out for about a week with a foot injury he suffered here in Saturday's loss.

Geiberger's experience key to Open victory

given it away, so I guess it was my turn."

Geiberger said he felt he could really win the tourney on the 14th. He hit a near perfect drive, cutting across the watery dogleg, and Dickson hooked into the water. A fine wedge left him a 14-foot birdie put, which he canned. Then he took stock of the situation.

"All of a sudden I realized that I passed Dickson and I had a chance to win," said Geiberger. Ahead of him was Joe Porter, who also was tied for first with Geiberger at two over."

Despite the happy turn of events for Geiberger, his heart went out for Dickson.

"It hurts to go out and watch a friend have trouble out there," said the champ. "You say, 'Wait a minute, this is a game.' But you find yourself feeling sorry for your opponent.

"I tried to talk to him on 14 when he was having trouble there. I tried to calm him down and get him to reevaluate where he stood in the field right there . . . so he could go back out and win it. If he would have turned around and won it and I was second I may have regretted it," he added with a laugh.

Dickson said the three short putts (of about three feet or less) at 8, 9 and 12 that he missed "got into my confidence. After that I was a little shaky." All three were three-putt greens and after that it was bad news.

"I was handling the pressure pretty well up until that 12th hole. I lost control there for a while. I guess at the time I had a two-shot lead over Joe and four over Al.

"That putt sure shook me up (on the 12th). The pressure got to me. . . "

Porter finally buckled on the final two holes, bogeying the 17th and finding the water behind the green on the 18th en route to a double bogey.

"That's golf," said Geiberger. "You never know what's going to happen. And that's what keeps any player or myself going out there even if you get in trouble."

Old pro Al Geiberger conducted a golf clinic Sunday. and Porter and Dickson learned a lesson.

Al Unser drives to Pocono 500 win

Fighting off pit troubles and a blown tire, Al Unser took the Pocono 500-mile auto race Sunday.

Unser, who shares the family honor with brother Bobby of winning two Indianapolis classics apiece, led for 75 of the final 80 laps in the 200-lap race at Pocono International Raceway.

His margin of victory over second place Mike Mosley was 3.4 seconds.

A 30½ second pit stop when hydraulic air jacks failed to work during a 54th lap tire change cost Al Unser a lap. On the 74th lap, he was forced to slow down when his left rear tire blew and scattered rubber on the track.

The younger of the racing Unser brothers gradually made up his deficit when the leaders began pitting and when Al took command from Mario Andretti on the 121st lap, he held the lead for all but five laps until the end of the race. It was his first USAC victory since the Michigan 250 in 1974.

Unser, driving a Parnelli Jones car with a Cosworth engine, averaged 143.62 mph in a race that lasted three hours and 28 minutes. It was his best finish in the Schaefer 500 since a third-place finish in 1972. The following year, Unser spun into the wall in the opening lap and was hospitalized for several weeks. He was 22nd in 1974 and 32nd last year.

The first four finishers Sunday were on the same lap. Ocean-hopping Andretti, racing here between Grand Prix Formula One events, covered 198 laps, as did sixth place Roger McCluskey, who was leading the 1973 race on the last lap when he ran out of fuel.

Guthrie finished 24th in a car that still has not found a competitive speed for the USAC racing. She earned $4,150 Sunday.

Unser collected $63,000 for his victory and also picked up 1,000 points in the USAC championship standings. He now has 1,489 points, moving him into second place behind Rutherford's 2,000.

There were 17 lead changes among nine different drivers in Sunday's race, and only 16 of the 33 starting cars were running at the finish.

Inoki bout costs Ali WBC award

MONTE CARLO (UPI) — The World Boxing Council Sunday stripped world heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali of its 1975 boxer of the year award, WBC President Jose Sulaiman of Mexico said.

Sulaiman said Ali had brought boxing into disrepute because of his exhibition match against Japanese wrestler Antonio Inoki Saturday.

"Our recognition and trophy to him represented the feeling of our federation members, who now feel very embarrassed and disgusted at Ali's action in bringing boxing into disrepute," Sulaiman said.

"We realize that Muhammad Ali has done great things for contemporary boxing but we feel he is presently showing no respect for the sport to which he owes absolutely everything."

Lonborg's mistake was major league

Jim Murray

Major League pitchers occasionally make major league mistakes. One of them got shot in an Elks Club bar once by a lady not his wife. Another tried to climb a pole with his automobile at 2 a.m. while he was sleeping off a drunk. Still others have tried to throw a letter-high fastball past Henry Aaron with the bases loaded. Others have tried to pitch seven days a week.

But no one — certainly no one right-handed — ever made a mistake than the pitcher, Jim Lonborg, did on the eve of Christmas in 1967. It was major league all the way.

What Lonborg did wasn't immoral, illegal or abnormal — it was just stupid. He went skiing.

Now, skiing is a fine sport for anyone who can make his living in a cast. It is no sport for anyone who has to walk to work — and run when he gets there. Canyon jumps are as advisable. Before a novice takes up skiing he should ask himself if he can live the rest of iis life with a spiral fracture. Or, more importantly, if he won't need his right arm for a year or two.

Christmas week of 1967, Jim Lonborg was not just any old pitcher. He was the Cy Young Award winner, he had just pitched the Red Sox into the World Series — where he came within four outs of pitching the second no-hitter in Series history. There were two out in the eighth inning of the second game against the Cardinals before Dal Maxvill, of all people, got the only hit off Lonborg in the game. Four days later, the Cardinals got only three hits off Lonborg in the fifth game and the four hits in two games was a Series record.

What this million-dollar baseball talent was doing on skis is something for a psychiatrist to answer. He would have been better off in the Indy 500.

As Lonborg reconstructed the fateful day at Heavenly Valley in Lake Tahoe, it was snowing and the party of skiers had gone down the back side of the mountain out of even earshot of the chairlifts on the other side. They had to climblaboriouslythroughdeep powder snow up the mountain and down the other side. They were tired when they begain their descent on skis to the top of the lifts.

Any skier could fill in the blanks thereafter. An edge caught, a binding snapped, a leg twisted, and a skier tumbled heavily into the snow. Once you're not standing on them, skis become 6-foot turning crews of a vise. The American League pennant went tumbling the mountain. Ligaments popped like banjo strings.

Lonborg went from Cy Young to So What? From 22-9 in 1967 with 246 strikeouts to 6-10 in 1968 with 73 strikeouts. All of a sudden, he wasn't pitching in a World Series; he was pitching in Louisville.

You don't only pitch with your arm. You pitch with your head, arm, legs, back — even toes. Guys can throw with only three fingers. But they need both knees. Lonborg was one short.

But the story of Lonborg is not that his career ended on that slope in Tahoe in 1967, it's that it didn't. The Red Sox wrote him off, although they wondered aloud what a Stanford graduate was doing putting his career on a pair of waxed slats and sending it careening down a mountain. The Red Sox shipped him and George Scott and Ken Brett and others to Milwaukee for a bunch of forgettables like Lew Krausse and Pat Skrable and Tommy Harper and Marty Pattin in 1971.

The only guy who didn't believe he had left his fastball in a snow bank in the Sierra Nevada was Jim Lonborg. Managers hinted that now was the time for him to take up skiing. Fans asked him why he didn't slalom the ball. But Lonborg was obstinate. Batters are not downhill runs. They respond to guile the same way as guys at a carnival shell game.

A famous crack attributed to Lonborg during the 1967 World Series came when he was icng his arm down after a victory and a reporter wanted to know if pitching wasn't more cerebral than physical. "If it was," cracked Lonborg, "I'd be icing my head instead of my arm." But the facts of the matter are that Jim may put his head in a bucket of ice any night now. The pitches don't arrive as fast as they used to but they arrive in unexpected locations.

He has become the key to the Philadelphia Phillis' pennant hopes. He came to the Phils in 1973. In 1974, he pitched 16 complete games — one more than than he had in his Cy Young season.

Lonborgs off to a great start this year, His ERA average is 2.6. If the Phils win the pennant — or, maybe, even if they don't — he may become the first pitcher in history to win the Cy Young Award England farmhouse.

If he does, you can bet he'll spend the winter at sea level, and wearing nothing larger than a size-10 with wing tips. And the only snow he'll see will be through the window of his 200-year-old New England farmnouse.

KEEPING BUSY. Rick Wohlhuter, one of the top entries in the U.S. Olympic track and field team, is seen here training for the Games; applying ice to his ankle to treat a tendonitis condition; talking with a client in the insurance office where he works, and standing in front of the Picasso masterpiece in Chicago. Wohlhuter, world record-holder at 880 yards, grew up in St. Charles, Ill. The Olympics open July 17 in Montreal.

10th Paddock Olympics to focus on individuals

Individual performance instead of team competition will be the accent of the 10th annual Paddock Olympics July 27-28 at Arlington Heights Park District with almost 2,000 8-13 year old youngsters from 13 park districts participating.

Though the competition for the large traveling team trophy always commanded a lot of attention, decision was made this year to focus on individual performance instead, in order to provide each youngster at every age level with the opportunity for recognition.

Paddock Olympics patches will be given all participants with over 900 ribbons given for 1st through 5th places in the two-day event. Rain dates are July 29-30 with all competition scheduled through the individual park districts.

Tennis and softball competition will be held Tuesday, July 27 at Pioneer park in Arlington Heights. Other events, including 50-yard dash, softball throw, team relay, jump rope, kickball, 100-yard dash, tug-of-war, standing long jump will be held at Olympic park Wednesday, July 28.

Participating park districts include Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Prospect Heights, River Trails, Rolling Meadows, Salt Creek, Schaumburg and Wheeling.

Roger Key, recreation co-ordinator of Arlington Heights Park district, is this year's Olympics chairman.

Mets batter Cub pitching to sweep weekend series

by DON FRISKE

Ed Kranepool, the last of the original New York Mets, said it best when he mentioned that Wrigley Field is a good park for anyone to hit in.

The Mets came to town Friday hoping to break out of a June scoring slump. They left with a three-game sweep over the Cubs as they poured across eight runs in the second inning and coasted to a 13-3 win in the final contest Sunday.

That gave them 30 runs in three games against Cub pitching and the eight-run inning tied a Met record, something they haven't done since 1970.

"I think we scored about 30 runs in a month before this weekend," Kranepool said. "You just have to keep battling because a slump like we had hurts some guys, especially the younger players."

Kranepool continued his own personal hitting streak Sunday with three hits, including a two-run homer in the second. He has now hit safely in 11 of the last 13 games, with 18 hits in 44 at-bats during that time.

"It's all contagious," Kranepool said, referring to the club's strong weekend performance. "I've been hot and I'm seeing the ball well. I started off slow because of the strike in the spring and I guess it just takes some guys longer to come around."

When Mike Phillips led off the game with a homerun, it was an indication that Cubs' starter Rick Reuschel was lacking the stuff that earned him victories in six of his seven previous decisions before Sunday.

Del Unser ond Wayne Garrett got the Mets going in the second with singles and Reuschel got himself in further trouble when he popped Mets' pitcher Craig Swam in the back of the helmet to load the bases.

Phillips singled in two runs before center fielder Joe Wallis kept the Mets from really going wild in the inning. He ran as fast as he could, then dove as far as he could, to pull in Felix Millan's line drive.

But the Mets just kept on hitting Reuschel's breaking pitch.

John Milner singled, Dave Kingman doubled, and Kranepool blasted his homer onto the right field catwalk. Then Unser doubled off relief pitcher Paul Reuschel. Garrett walked and Jerry Grote singled to end the barrage.

In total, eight runs scored on eight hits as 13 Mets came to the plate.

Swan did a fine job on the mound for the Mets, even though he said after the game that he was very tired after the second inning.

He struck out seven in the same amount of innings while allowing only five scattered hits before leaving in the seventh.

"It seemed like the best slider I've ever had," Swan said of his most effectiv pitch. "Most of the curbe balls I threw were also going over the plate and that's unusual for me. I usually go with my fast ball all the time."

Mets' manager Joe Frazier said Swan has pitched well in his last five starts, but has only been credited with two wins for his efforts.

Improving his record to 4-7 Sunday, Swan said he needed the scoring support he got because he wasn't feeling well from the start of the game.

The Cubs scoring came on a solo homer by Bill Madlock in the sixth and a two-run shot by Wallis in the ninth off Skip Lockwood.

"We were due to break loose," said Frazier. "We'd been stymied too long. We needed to get the bats rolling and we did."

The Mets are now 37-37 and still have faint hopes of catching runaway division leader Philadelphia.

"We have to start sweeping the Phillies to be realistic about it," Kranepool said.

Nasty words spell trouble for tennis pro Ilie Nastase

by MURRAY OLDERMAN

KEAUHOU-KONA, Hawaii — Around the flopping black mane of Ilie Nastase, the Romanian madcap, controversy swirls as naturally and as frenziedly as a Pacific squall.

Nasty, who may be the most gifted tennis player in the world, is simply too insensitive to the subtleties of normal human relations to realize the impact of his oncourt actions and utterances.

Muttering "bloody Nigger" during his Avis Challenge Cup finals with Arthur Ashe for $100,000, winner take all, confirm's Nastase's tenuous grasp of the nuances of decorum in sports.

In fairness to Nastase, he probably didn't even know he was saying it. The words weren't tossed at Ashe directly. Only that intrusive parabola network microphone at courtside picked it up — just as several years ago during an NFL game, the field mike broadcast to the country the four-letter reaction of a player to the violence of the moment. The circumstances don't excuse Nastase for his simple minded racist remarks. "He's a boor," said Julie Heldman, the tennis expert who shared the telecast booth and heard the remark, "— without lizing it."

In Holua Stadium, the day before his showdown with Ashe, Nasty, as the guys call him, greeted Arthur for a picture-taking session:

"Hello, Colorful."

Arthur, ever phlegmatic, looked at him blankly.

"You don't like that 'Colorful!' huh," shrugged Nasty. "Well, actually you are not colorful."

Habitually, when the Romanian sees the black American star, he yells out, "Hey, Negroni." During the match he cussed in French. He'll use profanity in a variety of other languages he has picked up in his dozen years as a world-class player. He has called Tom Okker a "bleeping Jew" in a match in Los Angeles. He complained about 20,000 Jews watching him when he played against Harold Solomon in Maryland, and was later forced to apologize for his remarks.

And yet the mercurial Ilie has his own super-sensitivity that's easily scratched. He is quickly aroused by questions about 1) his disruptive antics on the court and 2) his status with the Romanian government.

"What you call antics!" he fumed when the subject was brought up after he won the $100,000 outright by beating Ashe in five sets. There had been a 30-second clock in operation to make sure Nasty's tactics — he fumed at linesmen as he usually does and he gave Ashe the finger (a Romanian version of Hook-'em-horns) three times — didn't interrupt play.

"You can breathe. You can take your pants off. Long as you play by clock."

Nastase is a tennis player with rabbit ears. He hit a tentative overhead shot and yelled to himself deprecatingly, "Just like my wife." He walked around in a circle shaking his head. From the stands a voice rangg out, "Why don't you play tennis?"

Nasty, getting ready to toss up a serve, yelled back, "What the hell you think I'm doing?"

It has become fashionable to enlist psychiatrists, psychologists and soothsayers to analyze the turbulent behavioral patterns of this man who has let his tirades disturb the effectiveness of his play.

Ion Tiriac, another Romanian firebrand who used to help Nasty with his game, says, "Nastase does not have a brain; he has a bird fluttering around in his head."

That bird is a little disturbed right now because the Romanian government has shown some displeasure with its No. 1 player. He defied a cabled order to join its Davis Cup team in England, preferring to shoot instead for the $100,000 first prize in this WCT extravaganza.

"I get more publicity for Romania," he explained, "playing here before 30 million people on TV than 200 people in England."

He bridled at the idea his government might be hassling him. "If I have a problem," he sputtered, "it's my problem." But he flew off suddenly, ignoring his contract with the Hawaiian Leis of World Team Tennis, to return to Romania.

Nastase, who is married to a beautiful Belgian woman and has an infant daughter does not actually live in his native Bucharest any longer, though he retains citizenship. Ostensibly, he accepted a $125,000 WTT contract so that he and Dominique and the baby could roost in one place, Honolulu, for a few months. But his wife and child never came to Hawaii from Europe and there have been strong hints of marital discord.

His companion, and a settling influence, is a Romanian expatriate named Mitch who once lived in Venezuela and now operates out of New York.

The positive facet of Nastase is that he generates excitement in a sport where its personalities seem mostly to be hacked out of cardboard. When he plays, as he will, at Wimbledon or Forest Hills, it becomes an event.

THE FLY SWATTER...

TENNIS CONVERTS. Each with a tool of his one-time trade are, from left, Art Schalk of Park Ridge, former Loyola University basketball captain and guard; Phil Masi of Mount Prospect, five times an all-star catcher with the old Boston Braves; Fred Fassnacht of Mount Prospect, former Midwest Amateur golf champion and author of three holes-in-one; and John Aikin of Des Plaines, ex-Southern Illinois University and all-service linebacker. They're members at River Trails tennis club in Mount Prospect.

Tennis

Ex-stars 'converting' to court game

Sharing a pitcher of beer in a Northwest pub, they symbolized the elements which have shot U.S. tennis participation from seven million to an estimated 35 million in only a decade.

The old man said it was nice to see tennis become a major sport, but in "the good old days" he could get a court.

The middle-aged fellow, a former football player, said he'd finally found his sport and wished that somebody had told him about tennis sooner.

"We did, but you guys wouldn't listen," retorted a man just past 40. "You were getting fat watching TV and convincing yourself that tennis was a sissy game just for white-shorted rich people. Meanwhile, I had to sneak down alleys even though I was town champion. I was born 20 years too soon."

The middle-aged lady just sighed.

"They used to say varsity athletics were too strenuous for high school girls, but my daughter had to play four matches in one day at the IHSA tournament," she reflected. "Isn't it amazing how much we improved our stamina in just a few years?"

The fifth party, a high school boy sipping a coke, excused himself. He said his "Excellence" gang was playing a junior tournament the next morning and he needed some sleep. Perhaps unknowly the youngster is in the eye of a tornado. The indoor "Excellence" program, a 12-year-old creation of the Chicago District Tennis Assoc., is slowly but inexorably bringing local tennis to parity with warm-weather climes like California, Florida and Texas.

With indoor play transofrming a seldom-sung five-month activity into the only real year-round sport in the cold-weather belt, the ranks of outside luminaries converting to tennis is increasing by the month.

At River Trails Tennis Center in Mount Prospect, for example, Art Schalk, former Loyola University basketball guard, Bill Salisbury, one-time Northern Illinois University forward, and Joe Steger, a football player at St. Ambrose College, are on inter-club teams. Phil Masi, a 13-year National League catcher and five times an all-star game participant, plays doubles twice a week. Fred Fassnacht, former Northwestern golf star, placed third out of 10 in one "B" league and fifth out of 16 in another. Bill Abernethy, ex-minor league baseball pitcher, plays in a doubles league on Fridays.

Other leaguers include Tony Capalbo, former Weber High and North Carolina State basketball guard; Allen Haney and John Aikin, linebackers at SMU and Southern Illinois, respectively; Tom Bowersox, a Carthage College basketball center; Wayne Andersen, a 9.6 sprinter at Harvard; Betty Allseits, former volleyball star, and Paul French, a state prep wrestling champion in the '40s.

Bill Jones of Glencoe, Chicagoland's current tennis darling in the wake of national 70-and-over clay and grass titles, also came out of basketball. He was a member of a state championship high school team at Richmond, Ind., in the '20s.

Age-group tournaments offer new competitive horizons for the converts. George Yardley, former all-NBA forward, won the U.S. 35-and-over doubles crown two years ago. Duane Klueh, another NBA veteran and athletic director at Indiana State, has won four Western 35 to 45 titles in six years. Jack Laffey of Batavia, another basketball pro, didn't play tennis until age 40 but has been ranked several times by the Western. Don Bradley of LaGraage Park, former Tilden Tech cager now No. 5 on the CDTA's 45-and-over list, didn't start tennis till 37.

Elsewhere, you'll find people like Hank Greenberg, Ralph Kiner, Don Kessinger, Hugh Gallarneau, Stan Mikita, Bobby Weiss, Randy Hundley and Don Clawson on the tennis courts. There will be many more, now that tennis is year-round and the sissy myth has been destroyed.

Diving championships at Schaumburg pool

The Schaumburg Park District's Meineke Pool will be the site for the 1976 Central Amateur Athletic Union Junior Olympic Long Court Diving Championships on Friday and Saturday, July 2-3.

This competition, nationally sponsored by the Chevrolet Corporation and locally by the Central AAU Diving Committee and the Schaumburg Park District Swim Club, will include swim clubs and participants from through-out Illinois.

Divers from 10 and under to 14 years of age will compete Friday and 15 through 18 on Saturday.

CHAMPS. Laura Stern, of Arlington Heights, and her horse Curtain Call, show the form that won for them the coveted American Horse Show Assn.'s Hunter Seat Medal Class this summer at the Milwaukee horse show.

Walter Cloutier was seated at a small table in one of Des Plaines' old neighborhood taverns. A 35-cent glass of beer was wrapped inside Walt's fist. Rain poured outside, and Walt had just left his job.

He came from work dressed in a white T-shirt, dark green pants and boots, the type with many eyeholes and long laces. These are the clothes of a real working man.

Walt drives a garbage truck for the Des Plaines Sanitation Dept. Before that, Walt lifted garbage into the garbage truck. But Walt injured his back when he slipped on a chunk of ice last year.

Before his garbage duties, Walt was employed in public works. He labored on one of Des Plaines' street crews.

And long before that, while stationed with the U.S. Army in West Germany, Walt was a nuclear technician. He worked on H-bombs.

AT 29 YEARS old, the former saxophone and trumpet player has decided to change jobs again. He would prefer to be Mayor Walter Cloutier, City of Des Plaines.

"I noticed that it wouldn't be that hard to become mayor," said Walt, who says he would not be a "fiddle-dee-dee and fiddle-dee-dum" candidate.

"Maybe you should say it wouldn't be impossible," Walt said. "That's a better word. It would be hard."

Last week, Walt announced his mayoral candidacy for the April 1977, municipal elections. It seemed to be a popular move with his friends who stopped by Walt's table at the old Des Plaines neighborhood tavern.

But then Walt received some bad news. Because Walt is a civil service employe, he cannot campaign. "It made me wonder," said Walt, who has lived in Des Plaines 26 years.

Oh, Walt could campaign. But he might lose his job. Or he could request a leave of abasence. But in the long run, who can afford that? These are trying economic times.

THIS NEWS PLACED a temporary damper on Walt's mayoral aspirations. "It was depressing," said Walt. "I wanted to start as early as I could, being the underdog, the longshot."

After all, Walt had chosen to become involved because most citizens could not care less.

"Most people don't pay close attention," said Walt. "That's one reason I wanted to run. I was one of those people not paying any attention to government."

Walt contacted his union, the Assn. of Independent Municipal Employes, for whom Walt has been past secretary and vice president. He also spoke with Charles Hug, Des Plaines city attorney.

Walt thought he might be thwarted because of some federal regulation or state statute. Hug said that is not true. Walt's hands have been tied by a local interpretation.

"THERE IS A civil service regulation which prohibits a person from being a candidate while in the civil service of the City of Des Plaines," Hug said.

"It goes back I suppose, to when the federal government started civil service in the 1880s," Hug said. "The whole idea is that civil service employes are supposed to be professionals and not engage in political activities."

Hug was asked whether that is constitutional. "Oh, sure," he responded. "They've ruled on this many times. I don't know that exact parameters."

This has left Walt Cloutier, professional garbage truck driver, with many questions about his candidacy.

"I don't know what an active candidate is," Walt said. "What can I do without quitting my job? Or, can I do nothing? So, I'm not really going to do anything."

WALT SAID THAT he will seek another job, one off civil service rosters so that he can resume campaigning.

If he becomes very desperate, Walt could junk the garbage business and play his saxophone for payola.

And if Walt has not located another position by next January, he still might request a leave of absence to campaign for mayor. It has been done before in Des Plaines.

At any rate, Walt asserted, "Any citizen can talk about the issues." When he does campaign, Des Plaines voters will hear the slogan, "Cloutitr Cuts Costs."

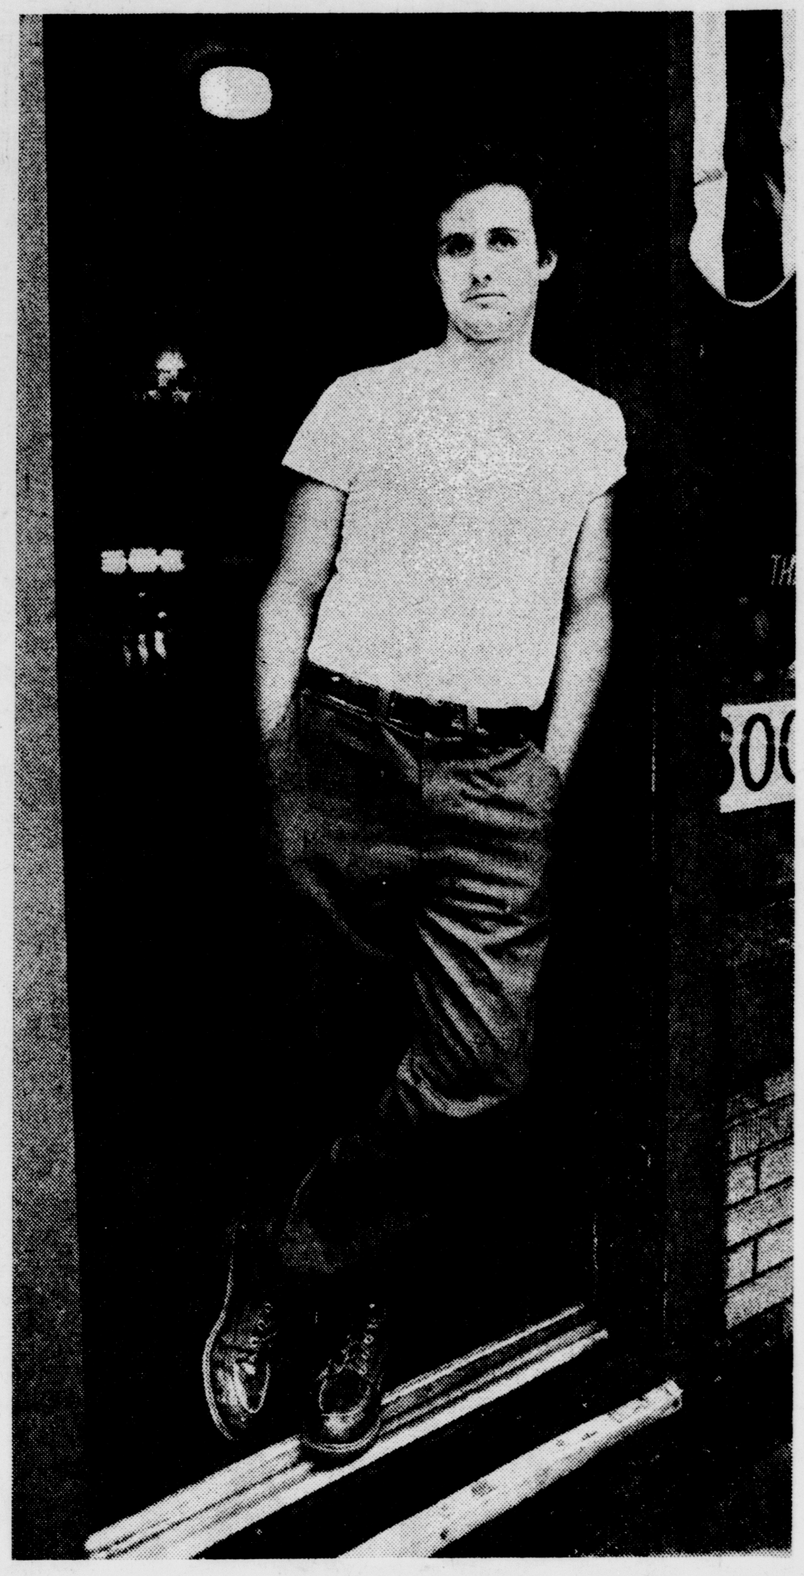

And he promises to work hard.

"If there was four feet of snow on the ground, I know I could get through to each person's house," Walt said.

"I know I can do an eight-hour job, campaign for another eight hours and plan strategy for another four hours. I can do that for four months straight," said Walt Cloutier, the professional garbage truck driver.

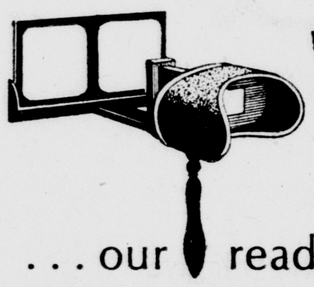

"I like to put the pressure on from the beginning and keep it on."

All he needs is the chance.

Pioneer life recalled with pleasure

Backward Glance

. . . our readers remember

Emerson W. Rogers, the great-grandfather of Jack M. Hunt of Mount Prospect, was born in 1836 and died in 1921. In the early 1900s, he submitted to a newspaper his account of pioneer life in Wisconsin. Following are extracts from that account.

In the fall of 1850, my parents and their three children moved from New York to Wisconsin. We traveled by wagon, canal-boat and steamer to Sheboygan where an uncle with teams took us 60 miles westward.

Father bought a tract and we moved into a little log house with weather-warped roof boards that let in snow and rain. The snow sifted in on our faces and made us pull the clothes over our heads and so pass the night. Morning would find several inches of snow on the floor, which we would shovel before it melted.

All manner of utensils were used in summer time to catch water that came through after every rain. The following winter we made shingles and put on a roof. Mother was greatly pleased.

FATHER HAD NO team and depended upon neighbors, helping them in return. We began clearing and making fences. We two boys who hardly knew an ax, buckled to it with father in the lead. A neighbor with a small pair of steers scratched the ground for corn. Six acresof this we planted.

It made a good crop, our salvation, as it proved. The wheat crop was ruined by the rain and hot sun, and "johnnycake" ruled supreme the following year.

The first year we got 12 acres of land broken up, which we sowed to wheat. After two years, we bought a yoke of oxen and a year later added a wagon.

Seven miles north was the Fox River, across which was Indian land. A trail ran across our land. The dusky red men in paint and feathers, past masters in begging, often stopped at the door.

ONCE A NEIGHBOR shoemaker hired brother and me to hay on the marsh at 50 cents per ton, he to make boots for us before winter. We fulfilled our part on time, but he could not get his stock of leather.

Christmas came, and snow with it — and no boots, both of us with bare feet. One day a lady visitor came and brother and I took ourselves to the woods. Snow was several inches deep. Had a hunter or naturalist come that way, those tracks would have puzzled him to guess which animal had passed.

New Year's Day brought the boots and much rejoicing.

I am an old man, yet my thoughts ofter return to those days of pioneer life with pleasure.

Hospital gets grant for alcohol program

Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, has received grants totaling $134,000 to set up a community education program on alcoholism.

The three-year-project includes work with criminal justice officials to try to motivate drinking drivers to seek help. It will help Gateway House Foundation strengthen its alcoholism program and assist clergy, physicians and social workers involved in the treatment and prevention of alcoholism.

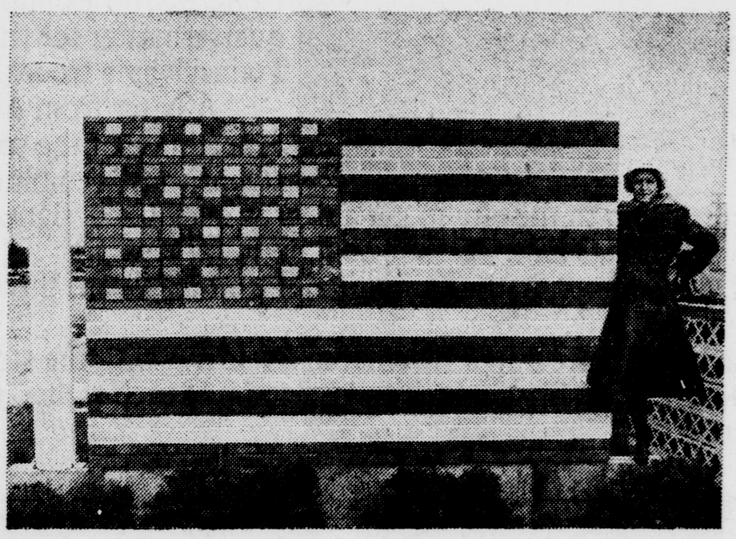

Orville H. McElfresh, director of Lutheran General's 74-bed alcoholism treatment center, will direct the program.

A $66,000 grant was received from the Chicago Community Trust, a $38,000 grant from the Joyce Foundation and a $30,000 grant from the Wood's Charitable Fund.

THOUGHTS ON A MATTRESS

Once upon a time there were three bears — Mama Bear, Papa Bear and Baby Bear. They had a nice little house on the edge of the forest.

One day the three bears went to the beach for the day and they forgot to lock the door to their little house. By and by along came Goldilocks, tripping through the forest. She had run away from home because her mattress was soft and lumpy and she couldn't sleep on it. Her Grandmother had said, "Why I slept on that mattress for forty years, and if it was good enough for me, it's good enough for you."

Goldilocks spied the Three Bears house, and when she found the door unlocked, she went in to try out their mattresses . . .

Papa Bear's mattress was a "Bleepy Bleep-O-Pedic" and it was too hard.

Mama Bear's mattress was a "Blurpy Blurp-A-Pedic" and it was too hard.

Baby Bear's mattress was a brand new mattress from Schaumburg Mattress Factory. It was so comfortable that the minute Goldilocks laid down on it she fell asleep.

When the Three Bears came home all sunburned and with sand in their shoes, they found Goldilocks still asleep. When they heard her sad story, they took her back to her Grandmother's house. Then they all went to the Schaumburg Mattress Factory and bought Goldilocks a new mattress. While they were there, Papa Bear and Mama Bear and Grandma all bought new mattresses, too. And they all slept happily ever after.

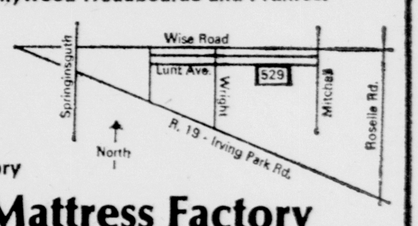

The moral of the story is that if you don't want Goldilocks to run away from home, buy her a new mattress at the Factory.

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE ISN'T THE ONLY PAPER THESE MEN EVER SIGNED.

For the past month, First Federal has been exhibiting a rare collection of letters, papers and documents from the Signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Some concern official matters. Others are personal.

All are authentic and original documents from the pens of John Hancock, Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, and the other 53 signers.

February 9th 1776
By Order of the Congress
John Hancock
PRESIDENT.

This priceless collection will give you a much closer, more personal understanding of what life in America was like 200 years ago.

There's a paper signed by John Hancock as president of the Continental Congress, for example, appointing a new quartermaster for the 4th Battalion of Pennsylvania troops.

A letter from Abraham Clark reporting that the smallpox epidemic in the prisons is coming along "very nicely."

There's even a petition to the city to get a nearby alley fixed, signed by an irate Benjamin Rush. (Some things haven't changed a bit in 200 years.)

If you haven't already seen it, the exhibit will be on display at three First Federal branches until the end of July.

For each visitor, we'll have a free Bicentennial folder—with the story of the Declaration of Independence, biographies and portraits of each signer, plus a reproduction of the original document.

Blood, sweat and tears?

The label says cotton

by MARIANNE SCOTT

If it hasn't happened to you by now, it probably will soon.

You note hubby sporting a sharp, new sport shirt and not until you find it in the laundry basket do you notice the label that says "100 per cent cotton." Lucky you! It's back to sprinkling and ironing again!

But wait. There's more. Not only does the label proudly and blatantly announce the content; the care tag suggests hand-washing it in cold water and drip drying, yet! Which is the manufacturer's new way of saying, "This garment may shrink several sizes in hot water or your dryer!"

OR MAYBE you just couldn't resist buying that pretty 100 per cent cotton blouse as you half convinced yourself that those memories of toiling at the ironing board were over-exaggerated.

No doubt about it. There's more plain cotton shown in ready-to-wear and on the bolts than there has been for many a year.

The demand is greatest in the junior and missy fashion market — slacks, blouses, T-shirts, halter tops, tennis outfits, denims. And all-cotton sheets are also enjoying a brisk upsurge.

Men's suits and separates in most categories are also readily available in pure cotton. "It's the style and not the material that sells the men's garments," said a young clerk in a Woodfield men's department who admitted that it was his mother, not he, who ironed the stylish cotton suit he was wearing.

ON THE OTHER hand, women generally are smarter buyers than men. They are also more knowledgeable about ironing. They know that ironing is an inconvenience to be avoided at all costs and they know that unless a cotton garment is in gauze or crinkle weave, it will need ironing. Women might buy a garment or two in all-cotton because of coolness or just because of style, but what mother in her right mind would want to return to ironing ruffles and tiny puffed sleeves?

Granted, tests prove that cottons are cooler than synthetics, but today most fabrics are blends of cotton for coolness and man-made fibers (usually polyester) for easy care and greater durability.

So why is all-cotton returning to the shops in ever increasing amounts? Because it's THE LOOK of the Bicentennial year. Natural. Earthy. Rustic. Genuine. Organic.

VIRGINIA settlers planted cotton in their first gardens in 1607 and later colonists proudly wore "homespun" cotton as a symbol of American independence. Not long after The Revolution cotton began to emerge as one of America's major crops.

It still is one of our major crops, but costs are skyrocketing, putting cotton on the "endangered species" fabric list. In the last 10 years most of our American mills have been converted into blend operations and the high cost of reconverting them back to all-cotton operation would be impractical. Especially since cotton prices fluctuate greatly due to speculative international trading and weather and other agricultural uncertainties. And if fire retardancy standards become stricter, the cost would be even greater.

The costs of synthetics are up, too, but they are still less expensive and easier to produce than cotton. But most manufacturers of blends are scrambling for the cotton to combine with the synthetics.

THERE'S STILL plenty of cotton coming from China, but the reports are that the Chinese are hesitant to export too much for fear of Congressional wrath that could lead to quotas and restrictions.

Even though cotton manufacturers concede that cotton is no longer The King, high costs could mean that cotton will become the snob fabric of the future.

But all manufacturers agree that cotton will not replace synthetics.

Easy care has become a way of life for Americans, and while all cotton is presently enjoying an appreciable measure of renewed popularity, the performance of synthetics outweighs the comfort of cotton.

Home ec's more than pie pans and patterns

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

Jan Lochary may cook a mean spaghetti sauce, but this award-winning Schaumburg home economics teacher thinks there's a lot more to the business than pie pans and patterns, and she's proving it in an innovative program at Elgin High School.

Mrs. Lochary, 124 Winslow Ln., recently was named outstanding secondary educator in Kane County for her development of courses on "The Individual," "Human Relationships" and "Lifestyles" — hardly traditional home ec fare. But the courses have attracted nearly 270 students each year since Mrs. Lochary's arrival in 1972, and the bubbly young instructor says her accomplishments are "easy — what better way to capture interest than to create a class that revolves around the students?"

CAPTURING students' interest has been a 15-year occupation for Mrs. Lochary, a native of Ohio and mother of two teenage children. She graduated from Ohio University, but has been "going to school forever" since then and is now working on her master's degree from George Williams College in Downers Grove. Although she has always been interested in clothing and did teach sewing her first year, she is quick to point out that "the old stereotype of stitchers and sewers just isn't true anymore. Home ec these days emphasizes a lot more than skills."

Mrs. Lochary proudly notes her classes "could be in just about any department — and about half the classes are guys." The teaching material ranges from videotapes of popular television programs to more traditional textbooks, but the scope and focus of the courses change as rapidly as the lifestyles they examine, Mrs. Lochary reports.

"The kids themselves help evaluate the program every year," Mrs. Lochary says. "When I was teaching 10 years ago, marriage in high school wasn't a big issue, but Elgin is a small town and high school marriages are fairly common. It's one of the reasons the kids need to be informed."

WHILE MRS. LOCHARY'S classes deal with such ambiguous topics as "who am I" and "how do I get along with my parents," she says she and the rest of today's teachers must be more prepared on a wider variety of subjects than their predecessors who dealt with more concrete ABC's.

"The days when you could use the same basic lesson plan year after year are gone forever," she says with a smile. "Kids are a tough audience today — they're more aware and willing to challenge a teacher — so I think teachers are more willing to go that extra mile today."

Part of Mrs. Lochary's own "Extra mile" was the development of a program for teacher aides in which high school students served as tutors for mentary and junior high schools, nursing homes, and preschools in the area. Although the program was cut due to a lack of funds, Mrs. Lochary reports the participation was "just great."

WHEN SHE'S NOT leading a discussion on divorce or spending hours in the library preparing for it, Mrs. Lochary is likely to be refinishing a piece of the family's colonial style furniture or just enjoying her husband and two about-to-be-freshmen at Schaumburg High School. She's also active on the Illinois Council on Family Relations and is a steering committee member of the District U-46 Instructional Council, a curriculum advisory board for the district.

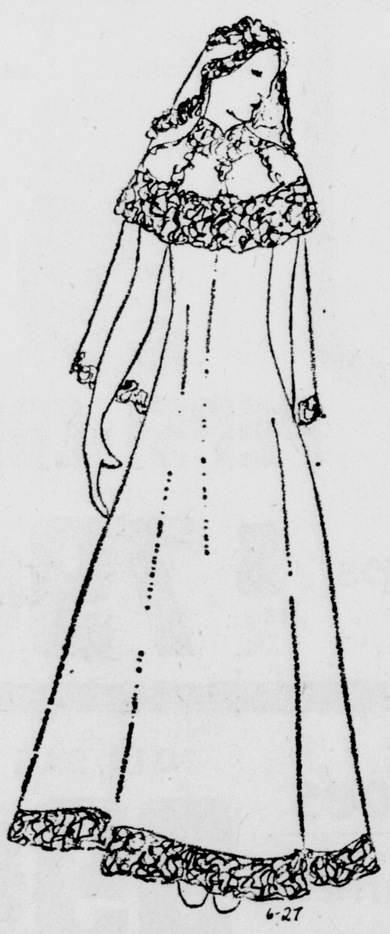

Whatever she's involved in at the moment, Mrs. Lochary's penchant for teaching shines through. She loves teaching adolescents because "it's one of the most exciting and scary ages. It's a great feeling to know I've helped a person develop."

"I'm very, very fortunate," Mrs. Lochary says with a wide smile. "I'm one of those rare people who have found exactly what they wanted to do, and have been able to go out and do it."

JAN LOCHARY, a Schaumburg resident and teacher at Elgin High School, was recently named outstanding secondary educator of Kane County. She teaches home ec, but her classes offer much more than the stitching and cooking of more traditional home ec departments.

Early start on wedding gown won't hurt fabrics

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I will be making the wedding gown for my future daughter-in-law for a September wedding. The gown is to be made of satin with a taffeta slip. Will the lace and satin turn yellow if I begin this big project now since I will need a lot of time for it? —Mrs. J. E.

DearMrs.J.E.,

By all means, begin early — this is more work than you would imagine. The satin, taffeta and any lace you might applique on the gown will not change color in a matter of months. The color might deepen if you pack it away for 20 years or more.

One tip for working with wedding gowns or bridesmaids' dresses is to leave the final fitting for the last minute. Most brides lose a few pounds right before the wedding because of rushing around, and going to parties. Leave the side seams basted, but not stitched until the last minute. This could mean only about ¼ inch in the waist area. The hem can be finished.

When working with reembroidered lace, remember that you won't have to throw away any of this beautiful lace. You can applique any left-over lace on the veil or shoes. Simply use a loose running stitch. There is no need to overcast any of the lace edges because the reembroidery keeps the lace in shape.

Dear Readers,

Mrs. Carmella S. has sent me the following idea and I thought it was so good I would like to pass it on to you, just as she presented it to me. Before I begin, may I thank Carmella, and I hope that more of you will share your good ideas with all of us.

"I have been making picnic table and bench covers for myself and friends for years. They make marvelous gifts and everyone loves them.

"For a six-foot table and two benches you'll need five yards of fabric, preferably permanent press and in a colorful print. Cut in half, leaving two lengths of two yards each. Slit one piece in half the long way (these will be the two lengths needed for the benches).

"Check the size with your table and benches, allowing enough fabric to wrap around the width of the boards plus about four inches extra to lap around the edges. Round off the corners. Stitch a casing around all the pieces (this could be done simply with bias fold tape), then insert elastic. I do this in one operation, but you can use a small safety pin for the elastic.

"Be sure to check the length of the table before purchasing your fabric. If the table is only five feet long, you will only need four yards of fabric. You'll love these covers — you don't have to wipe off table and benches for each cook-out, they can be washed after each use, they're beautiful and best of all, they won't blow away!"

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I just love your column because you have given me so much courage to do things that I would have been afraid to try before. I love the way you keep us informed on the newest details found on ready-to-wear so that we may copy them.

My question concerns the lettuce leaf edging for scarves. I have had beautiful results following your instructions. However, when I come to the corners, I find the fabric gets chewed up and often pulls down towards the bobbin, causing an awful mess of tangled threads. How can we turn the corner and have them look as nice as the other edges? —Nancy R.

Dear Nancy,

Thanks for your beautiful words. I just want all of you to keep the letters coming to me with your questions and suggestions. This column is for you, but I can only help you if you let me know your problems. Those of the most general nature and the most often asked questions will be answered in my column. So please sit down, jot off a note or a postcard and let me help you.

There is a way to turn corners when hemming, overcasting or whatever. You can thread a separate needle with a double thread, knotted on the end. When you come to a corner, lift the presser foot, take a stitch from your needle and thread at the exact corner. Then turn the corner, lower the presser foot, and as you continue your stitching slowly, you must pull the extra threads at the corner which will prevent the corners from pulling down into the template and getting knotted and tangled.

You may also accomplish this by stitching to the corner, lifting the presser foot and pulling about 6 inches of both threads out. Don't cut them but hold them firmly in your left fingers as you lower the presser foot and continue to stitch around the corner. Then clip the threads when completed.

You will find this little tip very handy when machine hemming anything that requires turning the corners.

Oysters relatively low in cholestrol

A year ago I was diagnosed as having type IIB lipid profile. Your columns and books on low-fat and low-cholesterol foods and dieting have been an invaluable source of information for me. Now all of my lipid levels are normal.

I would appreciate knowing whether oysters are safe to eat as a low-cholesterol food. Also, what is your opinion about the reports that vitamin C may prevent or reduce the extent of atherosclerosis? There is also an item in the newspaper that I am sending along stating that there are eggs that are lower in cholesterol than normal eggs.

It is certainly true, as your own case demonstrates, that many people can lower their blood cholesterol and lipid levels by proper diet. Worldwide studies have repeatedly shown this. After all, diet was a major reason that coronary heart disease almost disappeared in Europe during and immediately after World War II. As soon as normal dietary habits were resumed resulting in obesity, high cholesterol and other problems, the rate of heart attacks soared.

Yes, oysters are relatively low in fat and low in cholesterol although much earlier reports had included them in the high-fat, high-cholesterol foods. They are quite safe to eat (unless you add fat in preparation) for low-fat cholesterol diets. The values for oysters and other shellfish are included in the tables of my book "What You Need to Know About Food and Cooking for Health." Those who want this book for source information about foods and food preparation can order the new paperback copy from Penguin Books, Inc., 72 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y. 10011. Or they may find it on the paperback shelves at the store, price $4.95.

The information on vitamin C and heart attacks or fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries is contradictory. I do believe, though, that work in guinea pigs which showed that a deficiency could result in such fatty deposits and giving vitamin C would reverse the process establishes the point that a true vitamin C deficiency can lead to atherosclerosis. I do not believe that there is any good evidence that taking more vitamin C than the recommended daily allowance or what you should get in a well-balanced diet will prevent atherosclerosis or lower your blood fats or cholesterol.

THERE IS SOME interesting information about eggs. There is an experimental technique, using a centrifuge, to separate the different parts of the egg yolk. In this way much of the cholesterol can separated from the rest of the egg yolk. The amount of saturated in the yolk can also be changed by what you feed the hen. Hopefully, if the egg industry spends more efforts on developing such products, the day will come when everyone can enjoy egg yolks without fear of increasing their chances of developing heart disease, strokes or other complications of fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries. Unfortunately such products are not now available.

You can use the egg substitutes, but it does make a difference which ones you use. One of the more popular of these is still rather high in fat even though it is devoid of cholesterol. Don't forget, the body can manufacture its own excess cholesterol, particularly if you have too many calories or too much saturated fat in the diet.

Washboard action removes bad stains

Dear Dorothy: A bout with the flu had our baby vomiting and it left both of us with several stained tops that stain removers didn't do a thing with. Thinking of my mother's old washboard, I became aware of a large comb on the sink. Used it like a washboard and the results were fantastic. Even a stain from an oil-based vitamin disappeared. Another plus: No snagging on cottons or synthetics. —T. Kroke Perfectly wild! Tried this on a badly stained towel, using a large, coarse-toothed comb. It's a reverse-action (to a washboard, that is) and works beautifully.

Dear Dorothy: This is for the reader who wanted to know about pastry flour. There are four basic types of flour: bread, cake, pastry and all-purpose. To simulate pastry flour from bread or all-purpose flour, take two level tablespoons out of each cup called for in the recipe. If cake flour (which is so light) is used, you need to add two level tablespoons flour to each cup called for in the recipe. —Elsie R. Johnson

Lisa Perschbacher—Glenn G. Magee

A small stone chapel in the mountains at Indian Hills, Colo., near Boulder, was the setting for the afternoon wedding May 29 of Lisa Ann Perschbacher and Glenn Gordon Magee.

A champagne buffet reception on the grounds of the groom's parents' home at Indian Hills followed for 90 guests. The Frank Magees are Glenn's parents, and the Robert Perschbachers of Arlington Heights are Lisa's.

She and Glenn graduated from the University of Colorado at Boulder, and Lisa, an Arlington High graduate of 1967, also earned a master's at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. She is now a social worker for Children's Protective Services, Denver.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn G. Magee

GLENN IS WITH an architectural firm, Junge Associates, in Boulder where the newlyweds are making their home.

The bride's uncle, the Rev. Wesley Perschbacher of Hillsdale, Mich., performed their double ring ceremony at 2 p.m.

Lisa was married in her mother's ivory satin bridal gown and with it wore an ivory organza picture hat with a tulle bow and veiling in back.

She also wore Mrs. Magee's pearl necklace and carried a bouquet of gardenias with greens.

Her college roommate, Mrs. Douglas Porter of Boulder, the former Sally Stahmer of Palatine, was matron of honor and Mrs. Greg Eitzen, Boulder, bridesmaid. Husbands of the two were ushers, while Dr. Glenn Palumbo, Denver, served as best man and Steve Bowling, Boulder, as groomsman.

THE GOWNS worn by the bridal attendants featured a green and white puckered bodice and green organza skirt. They wore natural straw hats trimmed in green and white plaid ribbon and carried bouquets of white daisies with greens.

Among the special wedding guests was the bride's grandmother, Mrs. B. B. Larsen of Arlington Heights.

Lisa and Glenn are back in Boulder after a two-week honeymoon in Southern California and Baja, Mexico.

Ask Andy

Homestead Act helped settle West

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Patricia Carroll, 12, of Wingina, Va., for her question:
IS THE HOMESTEAD ACT STILL IN EFFECT?

The westward movement in the United States involved hundreds of hhousands of eager and energetic pioneers. These ambitious men and women hoped to settle somewhere in the West where opportunity, challenge and excitement seemed theirs for the asking. What prevented many from succeeding was lack of money. The Homestead Act, passed by Congress in 1862, helped considerably in this regard.

The Homestead Act provided 160 acres of land free to any adult citizen or alien intending to become a citizen. All the settler had to do was pay a $15 filing fee, live on the land for five years and improve it. Usually the settler, soon to be called a homesteader, would build a modest house, a barn, corral and fence at least part of his land. In five years he could get a final title to the land by filing a few papers and paying from $26 to $34 in fees.

The Homestead Act was a noble effort to encourage farmers — the backbone of 19th-century America — to settle vast stretches of public lands. And it succeeded, over the next 40 years, in distributing more than 100 million acres, providing new homes and farms for about 500,000 families.

But the Homestead Act brought disappointment to many farmers, who still had a very hard time making ends meet. Fencing materials, water, machinery and sturdy livestock were all expensive necessities. Many homesteaders simply could not make enough money from the crops of their small farms to support such costs. And so there were families whose years of great toil ended in defeat.

In 1873 the first of many amendments to the Homestead Act was passed. The new measures allowed settlers to claim more than 160 acres, but unfortunately wealthy land speculators and others grabbed huge parcels of land in their efforts to control the West's natural resources. Only about 15 per cent of the ublic lands to pass into private hands was settled by homesteaders.

By 1900 nearly all the good farming land had been sold, and large numbers of people were attracted to life in growing cities where jobs were plentiful. In 1935 President Franklin D. Roosevelt withdrew public lands from sale or homesteading, except for those in Alaska. And in 1974 the homesteading program was discontinued entirely.

Public lands have been disposed of in various ways in addition to the Homestead Act. The railroads received generous grants of land along proposed rights of way which encouraged railroad building west of the Mississippi River. And millions of acres were distributed through such legislation as the Timber and Stone Act and the Morrill Land Grant Act.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Stephanie Dunlap, 9, of Indianapolis, for her question:
WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A LEGEND, A FABLE AND A FAIRY TALE?

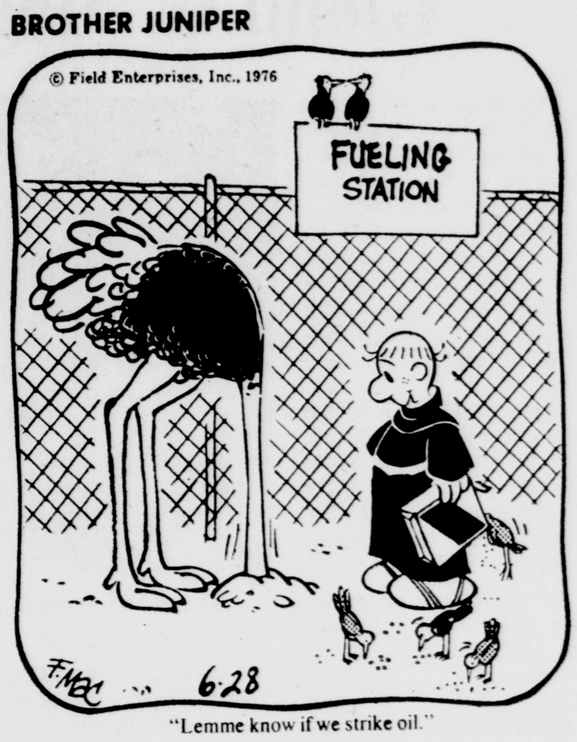

All three of these involve stories with plot and characters. A legend is a story that has been told time and again, handed down through the years and perhaps changed a little with each telling. It usually concerns true-to-life people and situations and, although not entirely authentic, is popularly regarded as historical. For example, the exciting and famous pioneer Davy Crockett inspired many stories about frontier life. Many are true, but some are considered unverified legends.

Fables are stories told with a lesson or moral and almost always involve animals. Almost every child is familiar with the fable of the tortoise and the hare by the famous Greek slave, Aesop, who lived in the 6th century B.C.

Fairy tales are stories of marvels and magic. The typical fairy tale is set in an unreal world, in which the events are beyond the realm of possibility, such as those in Cinderella, where the pumpkin ss changed into a royal coach.

Sims showed Ozzie how

Jim: "I have just written about some of my problems in learning bridge. Were you ever a student?"

Oswald: "Now that you have reached the age of 43, you should learn some respect for the old man. I am still trying to learn, although it gets more difficult as the year go by. The man who taught me more than anyone was the late Hal Sims. Hal's play of the cards was magnificent. His bidding was of the 'Bid 'em High and tell 'em nothing school.' Here is Hal at work."

Jim: "His problem was to avoid two heart losers. One way would be to strip the hand, play ace and one heart and hope that the winner of that trick would not hold the last heart."

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

Oswald: "Hal found a squeeze. He simply drew trumps, discarded one heart on the king of clubs and ducked a heart. He won the heart return and cashed his last three trumps."

Jim: "Hal was left with two hearts and two diamonds. North with our diamonds. East could not hold a heart and protect the jack of diamonds."

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

VACATION HOME
SACRIFICE
Near the Wisconsin Dells, we must sell 10 sites within 200 yds. of lake. Lake rights are included. Approx. 3 hrs. from Chicago. These properties will be sold individually with a shell home of the purchaser's choice at one total package price. We will sell our 2 Bdrm. A-frame shell home and basic ¾ acre site for $9,995. Our 3 bdrm. A-frame and basic ¾ acre site would run $11,995. Ranch home shells and log cabin financing can be arranged. These are not pre-fab or pre-cut homes but are built from the ground up by our professional carpenters. They are beautifully finished on the outside and are studded and ready to complete on the inside.
Because we must begin now to order materials and schedule work crews, these 10 properties must be sold immediately. Our representatives will be at the sites this coming weekend, June 26th and 27th. Should 10 parcels not be sold they will return the following weekend, July 3rd and 4th. This is an absolute sale. If you've ever wanted to own your own summer home at a price you can afford, this is your opportunity. For further information or directions and reservations, call Bergman Corp. at (312) 654-2282.

Illinois Bell cable splicers at work in a scene familiar to motorists. But the real work goes on underground.

Phone repairs—their splice of life

by KURT BAER

When Illinois Bell gets to the bottom of a telephone repair problem, it frequently means cable splicers like Mike Brazeau and Tom Altosino are crawling down a manhole somewhere.

"Strong arms and legs are a big part of the job," says Altosino who sometimes has to lower himself 18 feet or more into a manhole to get at Bell's underground arteries.

If a splicer needs blacksmith arms, he also must have the hands of a surgeon. Inside the cable lies a wad of 3,000 separate telephone wires. Knowing which ones to snip and splice is the difference between a successful repair and a communications blackout.

SPLICERS WORK year round in all varieities of weather. In emergency situations, they are on 24-hour call. They are represented by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and are paid from $158 to $299 a week, according to a union spokesman.

To most of us the familiar outward signs of their work are barricades in the street, pumps and generators and a canvas tent.

But the real job goes on inside the manhole. To get there, a splicer must "pop" a 125-pound cover, usually pump the hole dry, test for the presence of dangerous gases and set up a suppls of fresh air.

Workers can select either heated or cooled air from their portable power generators.

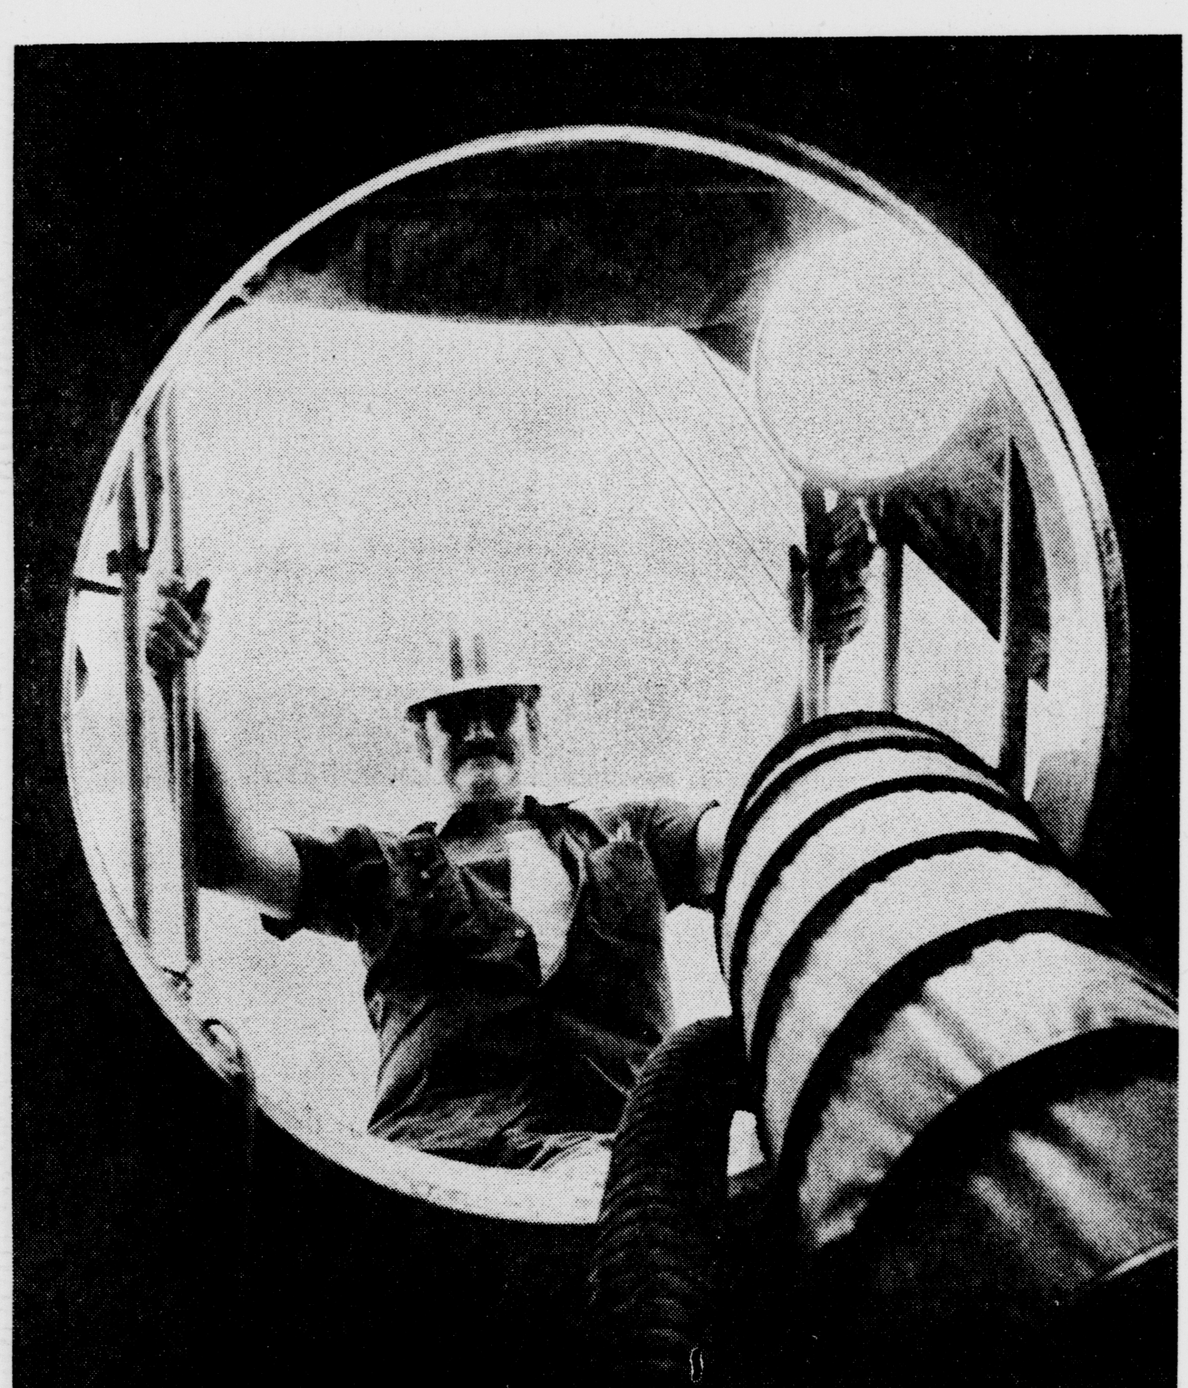

Airpowered chisels make the work of cutting through a cable's quarter-inch outer lead casing easier than it used to be, says Altosino, a 19-year veteran who remembers when splicers had to use a hand chisel and hammer to open a cable. Small scissors snip telephone wires as easily as kite string.

TO COMPLETE the job, a new lead sleeve is fitted around the cable which is then repressurized for added protection from the underground elements.

By pressurizing the cables, monitors are able to detect breaks in the conduit before telephone lines are damaged and put out of commission.

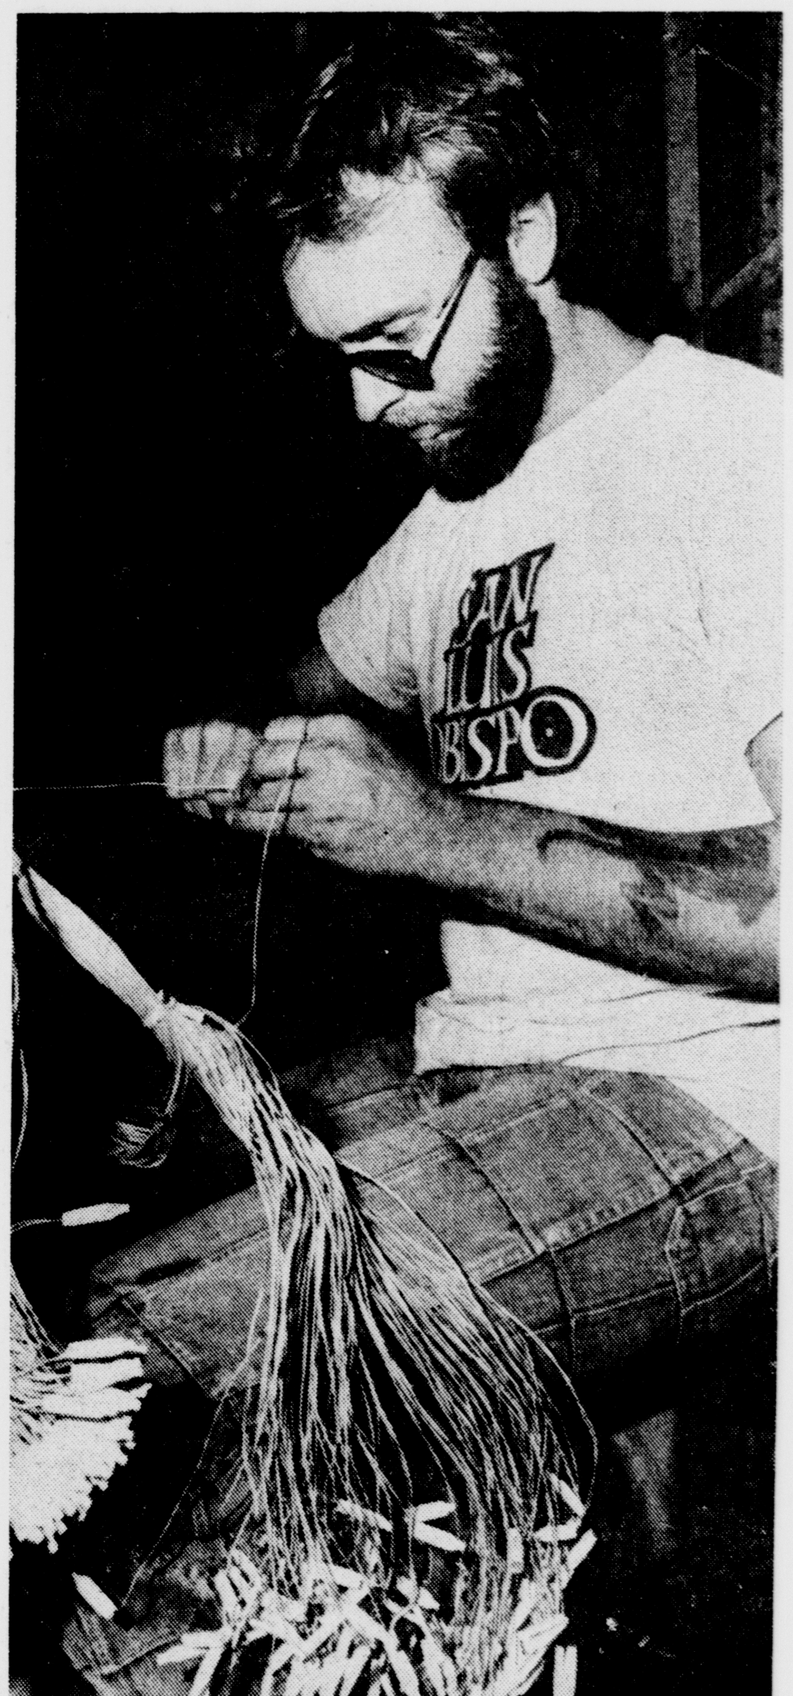

The splicer's job is essential to the operation of the telephone company. Workers are trained in the classroom and on the job as apprentices before they are certified as splicers.

"A lot of the job is common sense and knowing what you're doing," Altonsino says, two elements needed to succeed in just about every job.

Tom Altosino oversees a splicing job in Elk Grove Village.

Companies depend on federal proding

Energy research lacking: study

by RICHARD HUGHES

NEW YORK (UPI) — Private corporations are not fully using their research, manufacturing and marketing expertise to develop alternate sources of energy and instead are relying on the government for leadership in energy development, according to a study released Sunday.

The study, a three-year project costing $70,000, was completed by a nonprofit energy research organization, INFORM. About a third of the funding was provided by the federal Energy Research and Development Administration.

"The most startling fact which INFORM discovered is that, even though industry will eventually research, manufacture and market alternative systems, industry, for the present, is not the prime mover in energy development," the study's authors said.

"IN GENERAL, corporations work on technologies best suited to their short-term interests. They do not research and develop energy technologies to solve national problems. They are mainly interested in preserving and extending the market for their products, which are often in competition with other energy technologies."

Joanna Underwood, director of INFORM, said 142 corporations with interests in various aspects of energy development were surveyed, along with various government agencies and special interest groups. The 800-page study is believed to be the most extensive examination of alternate energy resources compiled.

Stewart Herman, the co-author of the study, said that while the 142 companies surveyed are involved in 207 energy development projects, from solar cooling and heating to coal gasification and liquification and trash-to-energy conversion, few were willing proceed without government assistance. The study reveals "there is a tremendous variety of technology" available in the private sector, he said.

BUT, HERMAN added, "the key to what technology would be developed lies in the hands of the federal govenment and not private companies" because corporations are unwilling to spend the vast sums of money needed for commercial development unless the government assumes some of the risks, deregulates gas and oil prices, can guarantee a market and adjusts environmental standards.

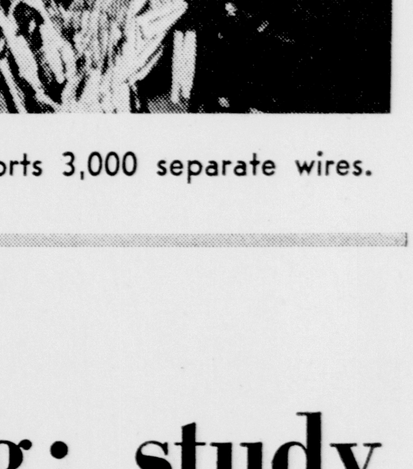

" 'It all depends on what the government does' was the comment heard most often, in one way or another," he said.

Private corporations, he said, "are becoming more and more dependent on federal funding, enmeshed in government procedures and reacting to government policies."

Ambulance, truck collide; 3 injured

Three persons suffered minor injuries Monday night when a truck crashed into a Buffalo Grove ambulance. Police said a truck driven by John C. Ohlson, 19, of 2255 Rohlwing Rd., Palatine, collided broadside with a ambulance on an emergency run at 9 p.m. Monday at Arlington Heights and Palatine roads, Arlington Heights. Ohlson reportedly told police he did not see or hear the ambulance's lights or siren before the crash. Ohlson's wife, Lee L., 1-year-old daughter Jennifer and ambulance attendant John J. Klbecka suffered bruises in the collision. Richard Hanson, 14, of Buffalo Grove, who reportedly was being transported to Northwest Community Hospital by the paramedics after he fell in a creek in the village and complained of back pains, did not suffer further injuries in the crash. Arlington Heights firefighters transported the injured to Northwest Community. Lee and Jennifer Ohlson and Klebecka were treated and released. Hanson remained at Northwest Community early Tuesday morning. Police ticketed John Ohlson for failure to yield to an emergency vehicle.

Riders turn out for shuttle bus

A driver got lost on one of the morning routes, some commuters returned home for their cars and one bus was five minutes late, but ridership was high on the first day of a commuter shuttle bus service between Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights. The service will offer free rides until July 30. One-way fares will then cost 40 cents. Milton Pikarsky, board chairman of the Regional Transportation. This is a thorough rush hour service," Pikarsky said of Suburban Mass Transit District on a six-month trial basis, said "this is a sensible, economical and convenient approach to transportation." This is a thorough rush hour service," Pikarsky said of the commuter service that makes four trips to the downtown Arlington Heights train station during both the morning and evening rush hours. Many riders questioned by The Herald Monday said the commuter service would save them money in insurance costs, parking fees, gas, and in some instances buying a second car.

Inn seeking zone change

Developers of the two-story Holiday Inn, 3405 Algonquin Rd., Rolling Meadows, are seeking zoning changes from the city to expand the motel with a five-story 143-room addition. Plans also call for construction of a dome over the outdoor swimming pool and remodeling of the restaurant and cocktail lounge. Developers may need zoning variance for parking facilities before obtaining building permits.

Cyclist breaks leg in crash

A 21-year-old Hoffman Estates man suffered a broken leg when his motorcycle was struck by a truck on Dundee Road at Ill. Rte. 53 Monday morning. Police said the brakes of a tractor-trailer truck loaded with gravel failed at 11:45 a.m. Monday as the truck on Dundee Road approached a stop light at the Rte. 53 exit ramp in Arlington Heights. The truck rolled through a red light and struck a motorcycle driven by Daniel R. Ahern, of 436 Bode Rd., Hoffman Estates. Firefighters transported Ahern to Northwest Community Hospital, where he was treated for a leg fracture and head cuts, police said. Police ticketed the driver of the truck, Samuel W. Cozzo, 20, of Chicago, for disobeying a traffic signal.

Ingram sludge-hauling contract

8 indicted in MSD bribery case

by WANDALYN RICE

Two Metropolitan Sanitary District commissioners and the district's general superintendent were among eight persons indicted by a federal grand jury Monday in an alleged $1.2 million bribery scheme.

M S D Comr. Valentine Janicki, Comr. Chester P. Majewski and General Supt. Bart T. Lynam were charged with accepting bribes in connection with a $17.9 million contract between the MSD and Ingram Corp. to haul sludge from Cook County to Fulton County in a land reclamation project.

Also indicted were State Rep. Robert F. McPartlin, D-Chicago; Frederick B. Ingram and E. Bronson Ingram, chairman of the board and president of Ingram Corp., respectively; Franklin H. Weber of Riverside, president of Southwest Expressways Corp. and Illinois Southern Materials Co.; and Edwin T. Bull of Joliet, owner and operator of Bull Towing Co.

U.S. ATTY. Samuel Skinner said Monday the 123 count indictment is the result of a two-year investigation that took assistant U.S. attorneys and Internal Revenue agents to Europe to trace the flow of cash.

"I consider this investigation not only to be the most extensive but the most through this office has ever conducted," Skinner said.

Skinner denied reports published during the weekend that Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley and the Cook County Democratic Central Committee might have received bribe money. "Mayor Daley and the Democratic Central Committee are not the subjects of this investigation," he said.

The indictment specifically charges that Janicki, Majewski and Lynam received bribes from the Ingram brothers and William Joseph Benton, a vice president of Ingram Corp. Benton was named as an unindicted co-conspirator in the indictment. The indictment charges that Weber, McPartlin and Bull received money and acted as intermediaries between Ingram and the MSD officials.

THE MSD awarded Ingram the $17,990,000 sludge-hauling contract without competitive bidding April 22, 1971, and in 1972 paid the company an additional $2,925,000 for unloading and pipe-line facilities the company had built.

Since reports of the pending federal investigation were made public, the MSD has filed suit in federal court against Ingram charging that the firm overcharged the MSD in the sludge-hauling contract.

Janicki, whose six-year term as an M S D commissioner expires in January, was not slated for reelection by the Democratic party last spring. Majewski was elected to his second six-year term on the board in 1974.

Lynam served as chief of maintenance and operations for the MSD before taking over the general superintendent's job in 1973.

MSD Board Chairman Nicholas Melas issued a statement following announcement of the indictments saying the district has cooperated and will continue to cooperate with federal investigators. Melas refused to comment on what action the district will take in regard to the three officials.
